CDC Classes Emphasize Marketable Skills For Economically Disadvantaged

By Jeff Winslow
The Coastal Development Center (CDC), located on Base Road at Edenton Municipal Airport, is a program which enables economically disadvantaged people from Chowan, Perquimans, Gates, Bertie, Tyrrell, Washington and Hertford counties to become skilled workers in carpentry and welding.

The CDC program, funded by a $150,000 grant through the N. C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, Division of Employment and Training, works in cooperation with the College of The Albemarle's Continuing Education Division.

The desired effect of the program is that the students will become self-supporting, tax-paying citizens with skills that will be useful to them for the rest of their life.

Carpentry and welding were selected as the two most marketable skills because nearly all mechanical and maintenance occupations are enhanced by either carpentry or welding. The largest industry in this area, agriculture, verifies a due need for people with these skills, and the CDC program provides these people.

King George Byrum, carpentry instructor, and James Nixon, welding instructor, are the two men responsible for training the students in both phases of the program. Both are well-qualified for their work, and have done extremely well thus far. William Reeves, counselor for the carpentry students, and Louis Nixon, counselor for the welding students, work individually with the students and give their advice and help when needed.

There are two six-month sessions per year. According to CDC Executive Director, Robert E. White, the current session will run through September 30.

After the students finish their six-month training period, Barbara Smith, job-developer at CDC, then works with each individual on job-seeking procedures and helping to place them in unsubsidized employment. Mrs. Smith helped two graduates of the last program, William Neely and L. A. Chesson, obtain a job at Freeman Metal Products, Inc. in Ahsoskie.

This is significant because Neely is handicapped by the inability to speak or hear. The company's co-owner Tom Tretwell, has been working closely with him in trying to help overcome his handicap.

The N. C. Division of Employment and Training Project Monthly Activity Status Report ranks CDC No. 1 in the balance of the state for all activities under the code of Title VII. The program has also received many endorsements from state and local agencies. They provide a useful service to the community and serve a good cause.

Biggs Is Participant

TULSA, Okla. — An area man was in Tulsa, Okla. last week to participate in The United States Jaycees' national officer training college at the University of Tulsa.

Steve Biggs, a member of the Edenton Jaycees, attended the college to learn the latest management methods and techniques to aid him in assisting in the growth and development of the 20 Jaycee chapters for which he is responsible as Regional Director for the North Carolina Jaycees.

The 1,000 Jaycee leaders from across the nation who attended the college heard an address by Bill Potter, Jaycees International Director of Program Development. Also addressing the group was Tom Besozzi, past president of the Ohio Jaycees, and J. Terry Bechtol, a past national president of The U. S. Jaycees.

The U. S. Jaycees is a leadership training organization with approximately 300,000 members in some 7,500 local chapters in all 50 states and the District of Columbia. The organization is headquartered in Tulsa.
