Today's Children Lack Father Relationship

By Theresa T. Ford

Many children today are deprived of the experience of having a meaningful long-term relationship with a man. Because of rapid social changes, large numbers of divorces, separations and desertions; single (never-married) parenting, and various forms of cohabitation; changing work and social roles of both men and women, etc., fewer children have a chance for an in-depth enduring relationship with their father. Children usually have the most contact with their fathers at very young ages, and that amount of contact has been decreasing in recent years.

Both boys and girls are affected by the lack of adult male contact in their lives. Imitating other adults or role playing is an important part of a child's developing sense of identity and self-understanding.

Males struggling to achieve and maintain manhood tend to become social misfits much more often than do females. Perhaps this is due in part to their lack of adult male contacts. Girls are influenced heavily by their fathers in occupational and career choices, and in their level of educational aspiration and achievement. A boy's education also may be affected by the feminine world.

Men are important in a little girl's life. Girls who are deprived of close contact with men often distrust and-or also fear them. Through an enduring relationship with a father, or other significant male (father figure), girls can experience being loved and giving love and affection to others. She can learn how to be a woman and how to relate to and interact with men in a variety of life situations. This can occur in a safe atmosphere without experiencing the pains of emotional immaturity.

The male role in today's society tends to force a man to feel inappropriate and unneeded in a young child's life. Many work roles in many occupations and professions, work demands and schedules as well as recreational pursuits make it extremely difficult, if not impossible, for fathers to pay significant roles in the lives of their children. There is too much age and sex segregation in our entire society, and there are few mechanisms open as yet for overcoming this unfortunate situation.

Often when a man becomes a father, he doesn't know how to be one. He hesitates having anything to do with his new baby partly because he doesn't know anything about the infant and partly because of the lack of opportunity. A young married man needs to see his role as a future father long before the birth of his first child: He needs to be exposed to young children as much as young children need to be exposed to him.

To all of the many friends, neighbors and fellow church members we would like to take this opportunity to express our deep appreciation and gratitude for all the cards, flowers, food and most of all your prayers and all other deeds of thoughtfulness shown us during James' stay in the hospital and convalescence at home. Special thanks are extended to Dr. Walsh, Dr. Hardin and Dr. Lane and all the nurses at Chowan Hospital.

The citizens of Chowan County and surrounding counties are so very fortunate to have this fine medical facility in our area. May God bless each and everyone of you.

We love you,
Pattie & James Byrd
Jd.

Contacts And The Natural Look

Millions of people wear contact lenses today. Contact lenses correct vision problems, in most cases better than glasses do. But they have the advantage of giving your face a "natural" look. Unless you tell them, others would never know you're wearing corrective lenses.

They do require more care than glasses. And, like glasses, they should be prescribed and fitted by a professional. Because they float on the tears over the eye, however, extra care must be taken in keeping them clean and germ-free. Your eye specialist will show you how contact lenses should be applied and removed. This must be done carefully and hygienically.

Both your eyes and your contact lenses should be checked periodically by your optometrist.

If you follow these rules, contact lenses will serve your corrective vision needs even better than glasses. Contact lenses give more natural vision (especially peripheral) because they are closer to the eye (in fact, in "contact" with the cornea) while glasses must be worn about a half inch away from it.
