that's true, I'm just gonna start sitting in the dark ... might as well die, you sure can't exist anymore."

That was the frustrated response of an elderly waitress when someone told her that her electric bill had increased $7 from the day before.

The N. C. Utilities Commission last week granted a 13 per cent retail rate increase to Carolina Power and Light, the Raleigh-based electrical utility serving most of eastern North Carolina. That increase will average out to about $7 for every 1.000 kilowatt hours used by the residential consumer. Customers who use more than 1,000 kilowatt hours per month will find their monthly bill correspondingly higher. One thousand kilowatt hours will now cost a touch over $61. As recently as March, 1980, the same consumption cost only $43.51.

Spokesmen for CP&L say they are disappointed in the amount of the increase granted and will probably go back to the commission in February or March, 1982, (a couple of months from now) and ask for more money.

The 13 per cent increase granted by the commission was 3.4 per cent less than the $151.4-million annual increase the utility had requested.

tv. Ext. Chrmn. This is the time of the year for reviewing the 1981 growing season to deter-mine the causes of the ms that you may have experienced. Growers of commercial crops are constantly evaluating situations and taking corrective action. Even though your garden is on a much smaller scale, you could greatly benefit from the same procedure. One of the best places to start is with the initial planning of the garden. Was the best available site used? Did it have sufficient sunlight,

Trip Schedule Is Revealed

There has been only a few 4-H'ers paying for the roller skating trip to Spinning Wheels on December 30. "We need 30 4-Hers to pay right away if we are to go on the trip," Murray L. Goodwin, 4-H coordinator

The cost for bus and skating will be $2.50 if you paid before December 23. After December 23, the cost will be $3.00. Remember you can bring a friend.

The schedule for the trip is as follows:

good soil, and a water source to insure proper plant growth? If the water source was not adequate, the dry periods experienced this past season should have been convincing enough to make sure irrigation is provided next time. Even without a water source, vegetable yields would have probably been higher if some type of mulch had been used to conserve the moisture from the rainfall. Another important part of the planning stage should have included the making of a rough diagram of the garden site. The planting chart or diagram should have been the road map that took each gardener through the entire growing season. Without a planting chart, many planting dates were probably put off or missed altogether. The planting chart would have indicated the amount of kinds of vegetables to be planted, the distance between rows and plants and the time of planting. Looking back at this year's garden, ask the following questions: Were the right vegetables planted in sufficient quantities for the family's needs? Was the garden area utilized during the entire growing season by making successive plantings? Should the rows have been closer together for better space utilization? Has a rotation system for planting the vegetables within the garden site been determined for 1982.

Now let's move from the planning stage to soil preparation and fertilization. Poor initial soil preparation has headed Poor stands will also result if the soil is left lumpy with undecayed organic matter. Even if the soil has been prepared in the proper physical condition, proper pH of around 6.0 for most vegetables and good fertilization are still needed for adequate plant growth. When was the last soil test taken of the garden site? If the answer is at least three years ago, now would be an excellent time to use the free soil testing service.
