Continued From Page 1 and to have a man of Rep. Jones' caliber, with his ear constantly on the alert to the needs of all Americans, is of great value to his district.

Also, his longevity makes him the third ranking member in the 11-man Tar Heel delegation. Rep. James T. Broyhill of Lenoir, a Republican, and Rep. L. H. Fountain, a Tarboro Democrat, out rank Rep. Jones.

The "mighty first" has a mighty leader in Walter Jones. Long may he live!

Going Into '82

With a new year underway, it's time to look ahead.

From our vantage point, the outlook for the Public Parade and Tar Heelia is better than for the nation as a whole. However, a few miscues here and there can turn things around.

One area of added focus is in health care. Edenton is on the threshold of blossoming into a regional center for health care. Three projects are well along in development and all of them could become reality before 1982 draws to a close.

We are speaking of expansion at Chowan Hospital and ElderLodge-Edenton, and development of a Senior Village on West Hicks Street, near the hospital.

The hospital has necessary state approval for a 10-bed expansion as well as new ancillary space. The 64-bed expansion at ElderLodge and Retirement Concepts, Inc., development of a 60-bed rest home and 34 townhouse apartments for the elderly will make the hospital plan more viable.

In addition to providing much needed services, the nursing home expansion and Senior Village project will broaden the Town of Edenton and Chowan County tax base by nearly $2-million. These projects alone will provide approximately 100 new jobs.

At a time when citizens are demanding more special services while routine budget items are in the vice of inflation, broader tax base and new jobs producing increased payrolls are more important than ever.

To accomplish these things may require some trade offs. Good judgment, not emotion, must rule.

The Public Parade has a cushion against wholesale joblessness and the pains of inflation. It is diversification. And with the new health care facilities completed, this area will be the envy of those of greater size.

When one looks at things from the national scene, we are much better off. For example, the U.S., unable to balance its budget, is burdened with an enormous national debt. This is not the case in North Carolina and its counties and municipalities. The debt is low and by law the budgets are balanced.

In another area both our natural climate and our business climate are good. New industry and new people are moving in. This is the diversification of which we cited earlier.

The state and local scene will be affected by actions at the national level. But in those areas in which we can call our own shots, 1982 looks like a good year for those who meander along the Public Parade, Northeastern North Carolina and throughout Tar Heelia.

A Final Look Back At 1981

Gardner, Edenton's Town Administrator for over 20 years. Gardner didn't disclose future plans, but said that a recent controversy over the bids for police vehicles wasn't a factor in his resigning.

The Chowan County Commissioners voted in June to request for designation of disaster status, due to the condition of the Chowan River. A six per cent increase in property taxes was also tentatively approved.

Ballard's Bridge Baptist Church also celebrated its 200th anniversary in June.

July brought bad news to the workers at the Fiberform boat manufacturing plant on the Albemarle Sound. Fiberform was shut down, a victim of a recent decision by U. S. Inudstries, Inc. to divest itself of 14 divisions and subsidiaries.

Another resignation from a Town employee was handed in, this time by W. Michael Johnson, Director of Parks and Recreation.

Performance Set

Edenton-Chowan's students should be thoroughly familiar with the Children's Concert Program, the workings of an orchestra and musical instruments when the Symphony's Chamber Orchestra performs. Preparation for the student concert began in August when Otis Strother, Band Director and Mary Rhea Gardner, Community Schools Coordinator, attended a state workshop covering the program which was conducted in Raleigh. Information and ideas for preparing students was brought back to the school system, shared with the system's music directors and passed on to students. A symphony workshop for teachers was conducted to help those interested learn best how to work with their students. Educational materials, film strips and program recordings were purchased to insure that every child attending the concert would be as at home with the musical program as the performers.

The Children's Concert Program, which will include musical selections by Bach Copeland, Grieg, Mozart and Rossini, encourages student participation. There are two program selections, "Simple Gifts" and "In Ba'ia Town" which students are invited to sing and play musical instruments, if available.

The North Carolina Symphony has one of the broadest and most intensive education programs of any symphony in the country.

Planning begins each winter for the following year's programs.

Laura Oltman Is Featured Artist

The second event of Edenton's Women's Artist Series will feature classical guitarist Laura Oltman. The performance will begin at 8 o'clock Tuesday at the old Chowan County Courthouse.

The series, sponsored by the Chowan Arts Council and College of The Albemarle, is open to the public without charge.

was hired as a Men's salesman in the Dept. From there he was promoted to manager of the Men's Dept. and eventually assistant manager of the store, all in a period of 12 years.

Moore also added, "During that time I also pinch-hitted in advertising and window display."

After 12 years in Belk-Tyler's at Williamston, Moore was approached by Mr. Tyler, whom the store was named after, and T. A. Bailey, Belk-Tyler's Executive Vice-President about going to the Belk-Tyler's in Ahoskie.

Moore agreed to go and in a period of four years went from Operations Manager to Assistant General Manager.

Once more he was approached by Tyler and Bailey, this time offering Moore the position of manager in the Belk-Tyler's at Edenton. Moore took the job and has never regretted it.

Moore said, "I loved Edenton from the start, and now consider it home. Business and the advancement of the store have both been good, and our workers are hard-working people. We were pleased to be able to renovate and complete the building a few years ago, because the customers had been good. They made it possible to redo and redecorate the store."
