

Gospel Sing Raises Funds For Leukemia Victims

A benefit gospel sing was put on last Thursday night, February 25, in Williamston, N.C. The proceeds went to Mike Harrell and Chris Phelps who both have leukemia. Mike is approximately 27 years of age. Chris is only 14 years old. Chris discovered around December that he has this disease. Mike, as told by two members of The Singing Laymen, has been in remission for some time.

Martin County Auditorium was filled with people who came to donate and to hear some great gospel music. The Dixie Melody Boys from Kinston, N.C. drew the crowd in, however, the audience got a special treat. The spirit of The Singing Laymen from Ahoskie and The Jarmen Brothers from Jacksonville truly helped make the night a success.

He has two sons in the group, one who sings tenor, and the other sings and plays drums.

Next came the Dixie Melody Boys from Kinston, one of the top gospel groups in the country. The group is headed by Ed O'Neal, who sings bass for the group. The audience was totally involved in handclapping and foot patting from the first song the group sang. Ed O'Neal knows how to get an audience involved, as he did in the singing of "Caanan Land." Ed was joined by three other extremely talented singers, a show-stopping piano player, The Jarmen Brothers' drummer and the other talented musicians. The entire group was happy and praising God with every note they sang and played.

they had a minor technical problem, the group came through marvelously.

Next, it was family time with The Jarmen Brothers. John and his two sons sang a heartwarming a capella song. Then he brought his young daughter out who sang, with her brother, a dedication song to the families of Mike Harrell and Chris Phelps. After that beautiful song, a trio of John, his youngest son, and the wife of the guitar player, were joined by Ed O'Neal from The Dixie Melody Boys in singing "Ain't God Good?"

From there The Dixie Melody Boys came back and sang many meaningful songs. A heartwarming testimony in song and narration was given by the baritone singer. One could tell by just looking at this fine group of men that they made and class skits given. Art work and creative writing are interwoven in the process of teaching tooth care and dental hygiene. Daily time is taken out at school to floss and brush.

When asked why the concentration on third grade students, Dr. Hines responded that it was a "hunch that paid off". The decision followed much discussion on what age group would take seriously the importance of dental health care and could successfully manipulate floss and other tooth care accessories.

Dr. Hines said that there was no way to evaluate the success of his program statistically, - only subjectively. He feels that his staff's efforts are just "one of many things" that has possibly made a difference in the condition of the children's teeth. "The absence of problems," when he sees the students professionally at the 4th and 5th grade level, "speaks for itself."

Bonita Perry, grade level chairperson for Walker's third grades, coordinated the program and set up schedules. On behalf of Walker School and the third grade teachers she expressed thanks to Dr. Hines and his staff for continuing such a worthy program. "It's hard for them at first," she said about the flossing process, "but believe it or not, they learn how."

The District Health Department plays an important role in helping school systems observe Dental Health Month. Toothbrush kits, with "Preppie Alligator" toothbrushes are provided for each 3rd grade child. The school itself furnishes the floss for student use.
