Peanut Agreement Reached

The Columbian Peanut Company, one of the nation's largest peanut shellers, headquartered in Norfolk, Va., has announced that an agreement has been reached for Archer Daniels Midland Company in Decatur, Ill. to acquire its outstanding stock.

Columbian operates 10 shelling mills, 44 buying stations, and two cold storage warehouses in four southern states. Mill locations include Wakefield, Va.; Ahoskie, Elizabethtown, Enfield and Scotland Neck, N.C.; Ozark, Ala. and Bainbridge, Fort Gaines, Pelham and Shellman, Ga.

It is planned that the Columbian Peanut Company will operate as a wholly owned subsidiary of ADM and that ADM's present peanut operations will be added to those of Columbian. No change is proposed in the present management, with H. Waller Whittemore remaining as president.

Archer Daniels Midland Company is a major processor of agricultural products for the food and feed industries. The company is one of the largest soybean processors, corn millers and refiners, wheat millers, and fuel alcohol producers in the United States.

Apples, grapes, cranberries, plums and cherries should be stored in the refrigerator immediately after purchase and are best eaten within a week.
