

Stamps Featured

By Postmaster
James M. Bond

With the issue of a new block of stamps featuring the official bird and flower of each of the 50 United States, the Postal Service is highlighting some treasured, but lesser-known, slices of Americana.

The new stamps, which come in panes of 50, bear the First-Class postage denomination of 20 cents. They were issued April 14. The stamp designs are the work of the first father-and-son team ever to design postage stamps - Arthur Singer and his son Alan.

Many state legislatures went to considerable effort to select the appropriate bird and flower to represent their state. Some appointed official commissions to research the question. Others left the selection to a vote of school children. Several went to civic groups, garden clubs or state Audubon societies. And others surveyed all of these groups. One adopted its bird and flower after receiving ballots published in a newspaper back in 1894.

Efforts taken to select and protect state birds and flowers offer interesting insights into a unique aspect of Americana. Here are a few examples:

After a Colorado legislature adopted the columbine in 1899, the subsequent assembly of 1925 took steps to protect the flower from "needless destruction or waste." They placed bans on picking and selling columbines.

The 1918 legislature of Massachusetts was also serious about protecting its mayflowers. It not only imposed a $50 fine for the unlawful uprooting of the plant, it doubled that penalty if a person perpetrated such an act "while in disguise or secretly at night."

A devastating invasion of crop-eating crickets in the late 1840s apparently influenced Utah's selection of its symbols. The sage-hen, whose bulbous roots served as food during the crop shortages, was designated the state flower. The California seagull, which miraculously appeared to eat the invading crickets, was subsequently selected as the official bird.

Ohio designated the scarlet carnation in tribute to an assassinated president. In 1904, the legislature made its selection "as a token of love and reverence to the memory of William McKinley," who was fond of the flower.

The similarity between the yellowhammer's colors and the gray-with-yellow-stripe uniforms Confederate soldiers wore in the Civil War is believed to have led its selection as Alabama's state bird.

Fishing Forecast

WITN-TV Inaugurates
Fishing Reports

WASHINGTON, N.C. - WITN-TV has begun a unique service for fishing enthusiasts with two reports from the coast each week and a daily fishing forecast. TV-7's ALMANAC, seen weekdays from 6 to 7 A.M., will have a fishing report from Nags Head on Wednesday mornings and from Harkers Island on Thursday mornings.

A fishing forecast will be part of each weathercast weekdays in ALMANAC and Monday through Saturday at 6 and 11 P.M. in eyeWITNESS News. The fishing forecast will graphically display the best time to plan to fish the next day and over the weekend.

Picking the right spot and time for fishing is up to the individual, but TV-7 can help with the where and the when on its fishing report and fishing forecast.

The first mailboxes were erected in Paris in 1653. However, messengers, fearful for their livelihood, put mice in the boxes to destroy the mail; thus, no further attempt to install mail boxes was made in Paris until 1758.
