He is a graduate of Campbell College and an alumnus of N.C. State University. Daniels served as a reserve pilot with the U.S. Army Air Force in 1943 and 1944. He is a Methodist, a member of the Masonic Order, The Lions Club and the Elks Club.

He is married to the former Gladys Toxey of Weeksville and they have three children.

In announcing for re-election, Sen. Daniels stated, "If re-elected, I will continue to speak out for Eastern North Carolina and listen to the people and their concerns at all times." "North Carolina and the Nation has times of great economic uncertainty now upon us. I will continue my policy of being fiscal conservative."

Ranger 9

GREENVILLE — Ranger 9, the first television news helicopter in the Greenville, Washington, New Bern area, has been put in the air by Greenville's WNCT — TV.

News Director David Boyd said, "Ranger 9 represents the commitment to quality television news the people Down East deserve."

Boyd said the helicopter will be used in two ways. The first and most obvious situation is major spot news, such as fires, marches, and explosions.

But the helicopter has an even more important day to day role. Television is, of course, the visual medium, aerial photography helps tell the whole story in many cases by providing a dramatic and comprehensive way to cover the news.

Ranger 9 is a Brantly-Hines B-2 helicopter. The aircraft is small and maneuverable enough to get into tight locations and at the same time, it has adequate range and speed to cover any news event "Down East."

Ranger 9's pilot is James Wooster, a resident of Alliance, and a long time helicopter pilot.
