

Washington Report: Rejection Of Budget Proposals

By Congressman Walter B. Jones
The House spent much of this week trying to regroup after its rejection of all seven budget proposals presented to it just before Memorial Day. Looking back, it is clear that the failure of even one version of the House highlights the many diverse opinions in the House and in the country at large as to how to hold down budget deficits, preserve the tax cuts passed last year and beef up defense spending all at one time. It now appears the House will try again to pass a budget the week of June 7th. The President has complained several times that his original budget was ignored by the House. In response to these complaints, the House will probably use his original budget as a vehicle for considering alternatives, even though it is clear that his budget deficit of $122 billion dollars is too high for both Republicans and Democrats.

As I have said before, the failure of the House to pass a budget is frustrating because it calls into question our government resolve to address our economic difficulties. I think it is important that the House pass some budget in the coming week and do so without regard for political posturing for the coming election.

Because of the budget uncertainties, very little legislation was cleared by the House this week. The most significant bill imposes criminal penalties on persons who take steps divulging the identities of American Secret Agents.

Many will recall that at least one American Agent was assassinated overseas after an organization issued publications disclosing his name and location. The House was faced with the delicate risk of trying to restrict such irresponsible behavior without at the same time infringing on civil liberties, such as the right of free speech.
The Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee of which I chair has jurisdiction over the Ocean Dumping Law. We have been investigating the possibility that the Navy would want to dispose of its decommissioned nuclear submarines by scuttling them in the ocean off Cape Hatteras. As part of this investigation we originally intended to have a hearing in Manteo on Friday, June 11, to hear witnesses from the Navy, the Environmental Protection Agency and the public. Unfortunately, because the key votes on the budget may be coming up at the same time, we have had to postpone that hearing to an unspecified date. I intend to use our Committee's resources to investigate fully all of the scientific and health-related issues which might arise because of this method of disposal. Let me make clear the Navy has not selected any particular disposal method or location yet. But those of us in Eastern North Carolina must be fully involved in the decision before it is made.

Visting Artist At C.O.A.

A flutist who was named by the 1981 National Flute Association as one of the top three international flutists under the age of 27, has been selected to fill the Visting Artist position at College of The Albemarle for the 1982-84 term. He will replace classical guitarist Michael Chapelaine who has served in that capacity for the past two years.
Clifford Tretick, a native of Indiana, who is currently at Coastal Carolina Community College at Jacksonville, will begin work at COA on August 1. The musician graduated from the North Carolina School of the Arts and Oberlin College Conservatory of Music.
He was a recipient of the Nancy S. Reynolds Merit Scholarship, the most prestigious award given at the N.C. School of the Arts. Tretick also won that in-

New Office For Fruit And Vegetable Market

FAISON - A seasonal federal-state vegetable market news office opened here Tuesday.
According to state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham, the office will report information on vegetable marketing sold through the Faison Auction

Market and eastern North Carolina including spring Irish potatoes in the northeast area of the state.
Sponsored by the N.C. and U.S. Departments of Agriculture for the eighth consecutive year, the office will be operated by Steve Skuba, a USDA fruit and vegetable market reporter from Pompano Beach, Florida.
"Prices and market information will be available 24 hours a day by recorder telephones at Faison and Elizabeth City," Graham said.
Telephone numbers for the recorded market information are: Faison

Auction Market, 919-267-9211; Faison Area Packing Sheds and Terminal Market, 919-267-5331 and Irish potatoes and cabbage, Elizabeth City, 919-338-8906.
A mailed market report will be offered twice a week. Persons interested in receiving the report may contact Charles Edwards, market news chief, Division of Marketing, N.C. Department of Agriculture, Raleigh, N.C. 27611.
