Symphony Discussed With James Ogle

Local civic leaders were treated to an evening of Tea and Symphony with James Ogle, associate conductor of the North Carolina Symphony, last week. Ogle's sincerity was obvious as he praised the Edentonians for their response to the symphony's visit in January.

He expressed excitement at the challenge of tailoring one of the student concerts to a high school audience, as the local symphony board has pledged to provide them their one performance this year.

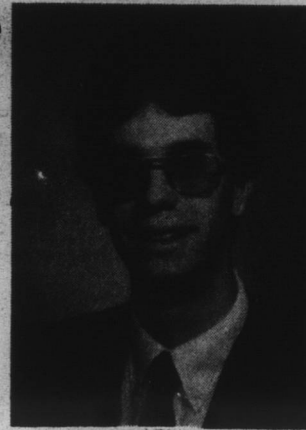

Ogle then explained that, while the symphony does receive some state support, it's not nearly enough to meet the high costs of providing the quality concerts. North Carolina residents can expect from their symphony. He stressed the importance of local funding to provide the concerts free of charge to students, and was most complimentary of Edenton's successful campaign last year. In fact, he later admitted that this visit to meet with local leaders was a direct result of this enthusiasm and that of the symphony for this town's successful effort last year; it is not a part of his regular duties to attend local meetings across the state.

Following Ogle's question and answer session, Mary Rhea Gardner, local chapter president, gave pledge forms to those in attendance. Since the additional student concert has boosted Edenton's bill for the upcoming concerts to $11,000, the support of all local citizens and organizations is vital. Immediately following Gardner's request for support, Mary Anne Morris, representing the Chowan Arts Council, surprised and delighted the group by announcing that the Arts Council had already met on the matter and pledged $1,000.

Before the applause had died down, Betty Bemby, representing the A.K.A., announced that her group has adopted the symphony as their cultural project for the year and pledged at least $300. Gardner expressed the gratitude of the symphony board and predicted that with the continued enthusiasm generated by Ogle's visit and the same generous support by the other civic organizations represented, James Ogle and the North Carolina Symphony could expect this year's visit to Edenton to be even better than the last.

Evangelism Team To Lead Revival

The Edenton Baptist Church will be holding revival services June 13-16. These services will be lead by a Student Evangelism Team sponsored by the N.C. Baptist State Convention.

The team consists of three members: David Cox, Preacher, a student at Gardner - Webb College; Jami Jenkins, Music Director - Soloist, a student at Appalachian State University; and Ron Glover, Pianist, a student at Duke University. Sunday services are at 11 A.M. and 7:30 P.M., and Monday through Wednesday at 7:30 P.M. The public is invited to attend.

The lifetime sleep requirement of the average American male is about 23 years.

Bike-A-Thon Held For Missions

On June 5, the Edenton Assembly of God Teens participated in a 25 mile Bike-A-Thon to help raise money for Speed-the-Light (a project to help provide vehicles, etc. for Missions) and for group activities. Pledges have amounted to over $500. The teens left from the Edenton Court House at 9:00 A.M. enroute to Cypress Point Marina, Rocky Hock Baptist Church and surrounding area, finishing the 25 mile trip at the Assembly of God Church on Hwy 17. Cook out and swimming completed the activities of the day. Those participating were Beth Boyce, Thomas Boyce, Cindy Evans, Sabrina Garrett, Billy Hollowell, Jackie Lawrence, Michelle Massengill, Darlene Skit-tlethorpe, Patty Skit-tlethorpe, Joseph Williams, Pastor Norman Gloeckler and youth leader Judy Lawrence.
