Crime Rate Fluctuates

North Carolina Attorney General Rufus L. Edmisten said on June 15 that statistics compiled by the state Justice Department's Police Information Network (PIN) show a dramatic upswing in certain violent crimes during the first quarter of 1982 and a drop in property crimes for the period's comparisons to the first quarter in 1981.

"I am concerned about the large increase in robbery and aggravated assault because these often lead to serious personal injuries," Edmisten said, "however it's encouraging to see the slowing down of property crimes, the most prevalent of all crimes."

The quarterly PIN report, a compilation of crimes reported by law enforcement agencies statewide, shows a categorical 9 per cent gain in violent crimes with robbery up 14 per cent, aggravated assault up 9 per cent and both murder and rape down 5 per cent.

Property crimes decreased by 2 per cent in the quarter. Of these, motor vehicle theft fell 9 per cent, burglary dropped 5 per cent and larceny remained unchanged in the statistics for the quarterly comparisons of 1982 against 1981.

The number of crimes reported to the PIN by law enforcement agencies during the first quarter of 1982 decreased 1 per cent compared to the number reported in the first quarter of 1981.

"This is the third quarter in a row that we have seen marginal decreases in indexed crimes," Edmisten said, "and that's encouraging. I only hope that this will become a trend."

Index crimes are those for which a minimum of five years' data have been collected for comparison to prior periods for establishing specific trends.

Arson, not an index crime, fell 23 per cent during the first quarter of this year as compared to a 28 per cent increase during the first quarter of last year.

North Carolina's core cities (Asheville, Charlotte, Durham, Fayetteville, Greensboro, High Point, Raleigh and Winston-Salem) reported a 4 per cent rise in index crimes.

Rural cities reported a 3 per cent increase and rural centers reported a 2 per cent increase.

Urban and rural counties reported a 9 per cent decrease in the index during the quarter while urban cities (those not included as "core" cities in the PIN report) decreased by 3 per cent.

Continued From Page 5-A peering family farm, depletion of soil and water resources, loss of prime farmland, and rising food prices are among the critical issues facing North Carolina's family farmers and urban consumers.

"In this election year, candidates should be addressing these important issues and exploring options for new and constructive agricultural policies," said NSF Program Director Cary Fowler. The booklet was prepared in an effort to stimulate public discussion and increase public awareness about the state's food and agricultural issues.

"Issues in Agriculture 1982" has been distributed to all candidates for the State Legislature. Copies are available for 50 cents (postpaid) from NSF-RAF, P.O. Box 1029, Pittsboro, N.C. 27312.

Proper Registration Is A Must

If you enjoy operating a motorcycle or have plans to purchase one to provide for more economical travel, make sure you have a proper operator's license.

According to the State Highway Patrol, troopers are discovering numerous cyclists operating motorcycles without the appropriate endorsement by the Division of Motor Vehicles.

In 1977, the General

Assembly enacted a law which requires operators of motorcycles to have their driver's licenses endorsed by the Division of Motor Vehicles showing that they are competent to operate a motorcycle.

Motorcyclists with licenses issued prior to October 1, 1979, could obtain the endorsement by filing an affidavit with the Division of Motor Vehicles showing they had two year's experience operating a motorcycle.

All motorcyclists obtaining licenses subsequent to this date must pass special road, written or oral tests demonstrating competence to operate a motorcycle prior to receiving the endorsement.

A Patrol spokesman said the motorcycle endorsement is available at any of the driver licensing offices located throughout the state. A fee of $5 is required due to having to issue a duplicate license; however, no additional fee is charged if the endorsement is obtained during a regular renewal of license.
