

NCSU Grant Awarded

RALEIGH—The Allied Corporation through the Allied Foundation has announced it will give a special grant of $100,000 to North Carolina State University over the next five years for salary supplements to be used for recruiting and retaining faculty in the Department of Chemical Engineering.

According to Charles Spangler, manager for college relations, Allied Corporation, Morristown, N.J., North Carolina State University is one of nine major universities throughout the country selected by Allied to receive special salary supplement funds.

Additionally Allied has given $11,000 in departmental grants for the Departments of Chemical Engineering, and Mechanical and Aerospace Engineering and $5,000 in an unrestricted gift to the North Carolina Engineering Foundation which supports programs in the NCSU School of Engineering and School of Physical and Mathematical Sciences.

Spangler said the funds total one of the largest amounts Allied is giving to any university in the United States.

He said his firm has seen that because the salaries offered by industry are so attractive, it has become more difficult for universities to encourage those at the bachelor's level to continue towards their doctorates and to attract new faculty members who are just completing their doctorates.

"We have recognized for some time," Spangler said, "that the number of people being qualified to teach were diminishing. These funds are aimed at the goal of increasing support of people qualified to become teachers in the engineering fields."

Dean Larry Monteith of the NCSU School of Engineering said the ability to recruit talented faculty "depends critically on supplemental funding such as this." Monteith said there has been a national trend of movement from key faculty positions to industry because of the higher salaries offered.

"This is going to be extremely useful to us," he commented. Monteith said the funds will be used for recruitment and retention of talented faculty in the Department of Chemical Engineering.

The funds given to the North Carolina Engineering Foundation's general fund will be used for enhancing a variety of programs in the Schools of Engineering, and Physical and Mathematical sciences.

Folk Celebration Planned

The nation's oldest and most colorful folk celebration, Mountain Dance and Folk Festival, is gearing up for its 55th annual celebration on August 5-7.

Tickets are on sale at the Asheville Area Chamber of Commerce and the Asheville Civic Center. Cost of tickets are $4.00 for Thursday and Friday nights, and $6.00 for Saturday. There will be no reserved seating.

The traditional festival opening takes place when a fiddler raises his bow and strikes up the fiddle tune "Gray Eagle", and a buck dancer moves out front to show his best style. Following the playing of the "55th Anniversary Waltz" emcee Joe Bly will declare the festival officially open to competition.

Competitive team dancing has long been a force that has fired up each festival, and this year will be no different. Sixteen of the finest big circle square dance teams to be found in the mountains will be competing for the coveted Cecil A. Pless Cup in smooth dancing, and the equally coveted Bascom Lamar Lunsford Cup in free-style dancing.

Oldtime and bluegrass bands will be competing for more than $2,000 in trophies and prize money.

Winners in all categories will be announced at the end of the show Saturday night. In addition to the dancing and band awards, first and second place winners will be selected in the following categories: oldtime fiddle, bluegrass fiddle, oldtime banjo, bluegrass banjo, oldtime guitar, bluegrass guitar, best bass, best mandolin and most outstanding performance trophy. "Special Awards" will be made at the discretion of the judges.

Again this August, visitors from all over the nation will join homefolks in re-telling a history so close to the soul of the mountain people - the Mountain Dance and Folk Festival.

Showtime is 7 P.M. each evening. Early seating is advised for Friday and Saturday.

Democrats Protest Ads

"The Republicans are trying to fool the public, and particularly the older Americans, on President Reagan's Social Security position," Al Adams of Raleigh, head of the Democratic Party's Elephant Watch Task Force, said today.

"Most of us have seen a commercial, prepared and financed by the Republican National Committee, that shows an old mailman delivering Social Security checks. He talks about his popularity, since he's delivering checks with the 7.4 per cent raise that President Reagan promised. He describes the President as a man who keeps his promises.

"The untrue angle on this is that President Reagan didn't promise that cost of living adjustment. It was in the law, and took effect automatically. What's more, Reagan tried to delay that cost of living raise by three months, at the same time he tried to eliminate the minimum Social Security benefit check.

"The bottom line is that if President Reagan had gotten his way, those checks wouldn't have that 7.4 per cent cost of living in them. The actor who plays the postman's role - and he's an older type himself - closes his message with an appeal to give President Reagan a chance.

Farm Tax Records

payers should verify the items on the tax return, such as income, deductions, credits, expenses, sales, exchanges, and depreciation. The method need not be complex, but the information should be kept in an orderly manner and safely stored.

Generally, farm records should be kept for three years past the due date of the tax return. However, information on the cost, purchase date and basis of an asset, such as a tractor, should be kept for at least three years after the asset has been disposed of. These records are used to determine the depreciation while the property is owned, and gain or loss at the time of disposition.

The farmer should keep a record by date, amount and source of cash and non-cash receipts and expenses. It is also necessary to keep a record of self-employment income reported for social security purposes and verify these amounts with the Social Security Administration from time to time.

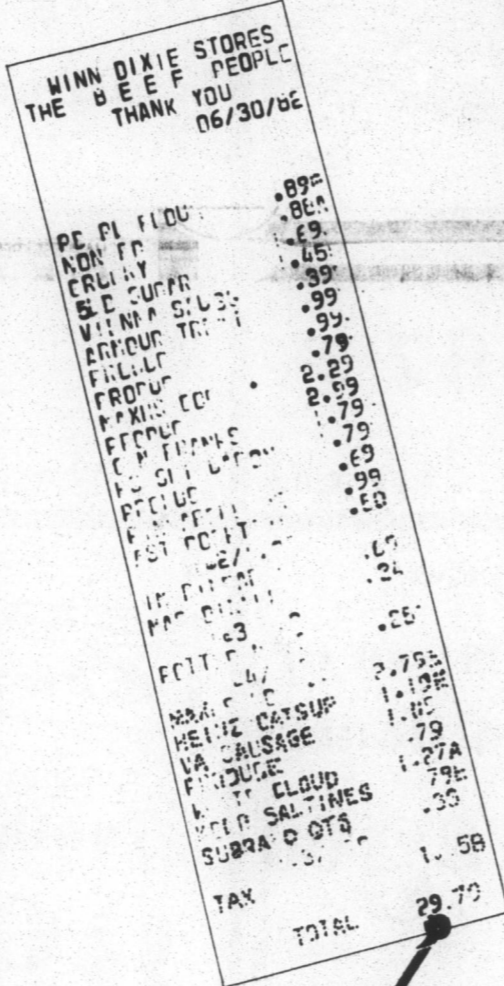

Keeping good records is simply good business for the farmer. Many tax saving dollars have been lost or overlooked due to poor recordkeeping.
