

The Bandon Chapel Notebook - Children Are The Hope For The Future

HI, NEIGHBORS! The school bus just rolled by - before it gets to school, it will be filled with happy, fun loving children just full of life and eager to get started. Perhaps one of these children will grow up to be our future President - who knows? We do know that our children are the hope of the future and it's up to us to insure that they are well versed in the precepts on which our Nation was born and by which we have prospered. FIRST and foremost - in God we trust - and if we trust God, we will do our best.

"There's a special art to living, and you need a frame of mind That can overlook the showers, 'til the sun begins to shine. To develop to the fullest, you have got to understand, That things don't always function in the way they were planned.

There's a special art to living, and the challenge must be met, But the longer that you try it, why the better you will get. Don't waste your time in waiting for the world to come to you.

You have to climb the mountain to appreciate the view."

On this Lord's Day there was a definite nip in the air but the sun was out in all its glory! The beauty of God's handiwork surrounded us - the clean, cool air was exhilarating - just right to enter God's House to thank Him for His countless blessings.

God's children gathered for Sunday School at Bandon Chapel were warmly welcomed by Supt. Stan Turbyfill. Those present were treated to an enlightening lesson by Deacon B. Kent Rowley entitled "God Provides Judges for His People". Bible truth brought out was that God's people do not always listen to God's leaders. Aim was that to follow His Commandments and assume responsibility for our actions; a sacred regard for human rights and individual dignity; free enterprise; respect for labor; freedom of thought, speech and religion; education for all our people toward a law-abiding, moral and enlightened citizenry that ignorance, error or superstition cannot mislead; and hostility to intolerance, bigotry, arrogance and usurpation. We must teach our youth the art of living. Share this verse by Grace Easley with me:

worked in military support work, and families that had someone who did not come home. Everyone joined in a moment of silent prayer to remember the above, those presently serving in our Armed Forces, and those who gave their lives for our country. Rev. Aubrey Yancey gave the Pastoral Prayer following Scripture reading - Mark 12:13-17.

Pastor Bob's message was very moving and thought provoking. Resume: As he was digging in the ground to plant a peach tree, his shovel struck something hard. As he planted the tree and placed dirt around the roots, he discovered the object struck by his shovel was an Arrowhead or Spear Head. The first thought that came to mind was that others have walked and plowed this ground before us - Indians, the Red Men, human beings, creations of God, just like you and me, and with a way of life extremely important to them and in many respects, to be greatly admired. They considered the earth a sacred trust from God. They never spoiled anything.

As we gather to celebrate Veterans' Day, let us remember that we are not the only nation that treasures a way of life and that as willing as we are to lay down our lives for our country, there are other people on this earth that have these same feelings. What is it about the American way of life that is so precious to us? I searched and searched to find the answer and only one word would suffice - FREEDOM! Freedom to make our choices and to live our lives without being hounded by government, religion, or police; to work at the job of our choice; to confront an opponent in a court of law; to pick our mates; to vote for whomever we choose; to become involved with the church or religion of our choice, etc. As long as we stay within the bounds of common decency, there is no more who will be able to dictate to us. Think about the millions of people around the earth who do not enjoy these

INSIGHT INTO EYESIGHT

DR. A. F. DOWNUM, JR.
OPTOMETRIST

Eye Coordination In Children

Common eyesight problems when they are found, must be corrected with glasses or contact lenses. But, there are more causes for such problems than nearsightedness, farsightedness, or astigmatism.

A typical fault is that a child has trouble in smoothly moving both eyes together in all directions. To compensate, a child will move his head instead of his eyes. While the symptom is easily observed, for instance when reading, it is difficult to tell off-hand if the problem is in the focusing mechanism or the convergence of the eyes. In either case, such a child will frequently become fatigued. In the case of reading, the child will probably give up after only a few minutes, and eventually develop an aversion to it.

Routinely, an optometrist's examination will test to find out how the child's eyes normally work together. This will include tests for eye movement, eye focusing, eye convergence, and the ability to change direction of gaze.

When Wisdom Teeth Create Problems

If all of your wisdom teeth have erupted without causing discomfort and other concerns, you're one of the lucky ones. Wisdom teeth may cause serious dental problems if left to fend for themselves.

They usually erupt or come through the gums between the ages of 16 and 30, one in each of the rear four corners of your jaw. Not everyone develops all four wisdom teeth, however, and there are even some people who don't develop any wisdom teeth at all. But most people do, and the complications can be painful as well as detrimental to your dental health. Sometimes wisdom teeth become impacted because they don't have enough room to break through the gums (our ancestors had bigger jaws to accommodate wisdom teeth). When this happens, they can throw your other teeth out of alignment. Sometimes they become infected, resulting in a painful and potentially hazardous abscess.

If your wisdom teeth are not causing any problems, perhaps they will not need to be extracted. But they should be checked carefully by your dentist and treated as needed to protect your dental health.
