Public School Involvement

by Walter Noneman

How Schools can use Gov. Jim Hunt's "Year of the Public Schools" campaign to boost citizen understanding and support was the focus of a November 18-19 meeting of school officials. Representing the Edenton-Chowan School System at the Winston-Salem meeting were Dr. John Dunn, Superintendent and Walter Noneman, Director of Community Schools.

The purpose of the meeting, set by the North Carolina School Public Relations Association, was to suggest ways school personnel can improve communications with local citizens and encourage citizen involvement in the schools.

Leading the workshop sessions was Dr. Banach, president of the National School Public Relations Association. Banach has developed a plan that is used in a large number of school systems in the nation to encourage public understanding and support of schools. At the Winston-Salem meeting he helped participants adapt the plan to their local communities.

Dr. Craig Phillips and representatives from the Governor's Office were in Winston-Salem, also. Phillips encouraged those attending to see the Governor's Proclamation as a way to build confidence in North Carolina's public schools. "We have an excellent public education system in North Carolina, but we must do better at letting taxpayers know what their investment is paying for," Phillips said. "We need to ask them what their concerns are, too," he added, "and try to create an understanding of our problems as well as our successes."

The Edenton-Chowan Schools presented a video tape presentation of their new theme, "Courtesy Is Contagious". The presentation was very well received. A request has been made by the North Carolina Association of School Administrators that Edenton-Chowan Schools should make a similar presentation at the fall conference in Charlotte on December 1-3, 1982.

More than 150 participants from across the State attended the conference.

Future Of N.C. Commission

Over 800 North Carolina citizens are expected to attend a conference sponsored by the Commission on the Future of North Carolina to be held on December 6 and 7 at the Civic Center in Raleigh. UNC President William C. Friday, chairman of the commission, will conduct the opening session on December 6 at 10 A.M.

Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr., will give the keynote address. "This conference marks the culmination of 18 months of discussion and study by citizens all across our state to develop policies and strategies to better prepare us for the year 2000," said Governor Hunt.

R.M. (Pete) Thompson chairs the committee in Chowan County.

In June 1981, Governor Hunt and leaders from business, government, and the professions joined with other citizens of North Carolina in undertaking the ambitious NC 2000 project. "Tens of thousands of people have taken part," said Chairman Friday. "They have attended county meetings, completed questionnaires and prepared technical papers. But most important, they have contributed ideas on what they want to see happen in North Carolina's future and why."

According to Friday, the conference goals are threefold: to give citizens an opportunity to review the Commission's draft goals and recommendations; to recognize the contributions of county NC 2000 committees, technical experts, civic and professional organizations and others; and to offer a forum for further discussion of the problems and opportunities facing North Carolinians in the future.

Third Annual Cheerleading Contest To Be Held

John C. Marshall, director-continuing education on the Chesapeake Campus of Tidewater Community College, was named head judge of the third annual cheerleading contest for 10 counties in North Carolina. The Northeastern North Carolina counties which participated in the contest were Camden, Chowan, Currituck, Dare, Gates, Hyde, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Tyrell, and Washington. Each county sent a varsity and a junior varsity squad which had won in the preliminaries.

The competition, sponsored by radio station WGAI, took place at 10 A.M. Saturday, at Knobbs Creek Recreation Center in Elizabeth City.

Other judges were Pat Balgavy, sponsor of the cheerleaders for the Deep Creek High School wrestling team in Chesapeake, Va.; Mrs. Cheryl Morgan, coordinator of the Youth Cheering Squad, Deep Creek district, Chesapeake Parks and Recreation, Chesapeake, Va.; and Diane Parrish, former varsity cheerleader at Great Bridge High School in Chesapeake, Va. and current employee at the Courthouse branch of First and Merchants Bank in Virginia Beach, Va.
