

Christmas Festivities Across The State

ed December 11-12. Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol" will be presented December 10-12 in Raleigh Memorial Auditorium with Ira David Wood in the starring role.

The annual Christmas Open House of the Governor's Mansion will be observed December 11-12.

The N.C. Symphony and the North Carolina School of the Arts School of Dance will combine for performances of "Nutcracker Ballet" December 17-18 in Raleigh.

Reidsville's Chinqua-Penn Plantation House will be decorated in the tradition of the Thomas Jefferson Penn family with poinsettias and other Christmas plants as visitors tour the house November 30-December 19.

Tarboro celebrates the season with a Christmas candlelight tour of several historic homes December 11-12.

At Weaverville just north of Asheville, the Zebulon Baird Vance Birthplace will be decorated in the traditional 1830 period December 1-23. Hot spiced apple cider and cookies will be served to visitors to the state historic site.

Historic Wilmington will be festively adorned for visitors December 10-23. The warmth and charm of the old city will be displayed especially during candlelight tours on December 11-12.

Carolers stroll through the streets, refreshments are served and candles light the way for visitors to see Thalian Hall, Burgwin-Wright House, Zebulon Latimer House, the Governor Dudley Mansion and other historic homes and churches. The Latimer House Wassail Bowl will be celebrated December 10.

Also in Wilmington, Poplar Grove Plantation's 1850 Christmas candlelight tour will be observed December 3-19.

In Winston-Salem's historic Bethabara Park the 1788 Bethabara Church and Gemeinhaus will be the site of two Christmas concerts by the Piedmont Chamber Singers.

At Old Salem the traditional Christmas Eve lovefeast will be celebrated at Home Moravian Church with services at 11 A.M., 2:30, 5 and 7:30 P.M.

The Museum of Early Southern Decorative Arts will offer a view of its early southern interiors decorated and interpreted in the manner of past Christmas traditions December 11-12.

Winston-Salem's Mozart Club and members of the Winston-Salem Symphony Orchestra will present a Messiah concert December 5 in Reynolds Auditorium.

Also at Old Salem hospitality and fellowship will mark the Christmas season December 2-4 and 9-11 with the annual Moravian Candle Tea. For more than half a century this event has linked the present with the past through various phases of candlemaking and decorations. The tea will be held in the Brothers House built in 1769.

The Southern Christmas Show at Charlotte's Merchandise Mart November 13-21 and the Carolina Christmas Show in Raleigh's Civic Center November 18-21 will feature exhibits, food, crafts, decorations and other holiday accoutrements.

These and many other events across the state will say Merry Christmas in a very special way to everyone from near and far.

For additional information about any of the events contact the chamber of commerce in the area or the Travel and Tourism Division.

Many special events of "Carolina Christmas" are published in a brochure by the Travel and Tourism Division providing specifics of time, place and type of activity. The brochure is free upon request by contacting the Travel and Tourism Division, 430 North Salisbury Street, Raleigh, N.C. 27611, telephone 919-733-4171. It also is available at the state's welcome centers and at many of the attractions across the state.

The Carolina Review

only thing definite is that the governor will go about having the longevity and merit raises reinstated as soon as the lawmakers are settled.

Confronted with that information last week, Hunt aide Brent Hackney said, "We've got to get the freeze off first—before we can even talk increase. Then in April, if the economy has turned up, we can talk about across-the-board increases."

Hackney, understandably, refuses to be drawn in to discussions of how big the across-the-board raise might be, if at all. But educated guesses now center around the six per cent mark.

Even a 6 per cent raise, across-the-board, would require about $115-million in additional state revenues—something not anywhere on the horizon at this time. Still, there seems little doubt that North Carolina teachers and state employees can look to a little better financial offering from the legislators this coming year than last.

ALSO GETTING READY....A lot of legislators have been in and out of town recently, also getting ready for the 1983 session. Some of them are arriving for the first time and are making themselves comfortable in their new offices.

The prescribed business on the agenda, however, has been a myriad of committee and commission meetings. In the nine days leading into the Thanksgiving break last week, meeting agendas included insurance, housing, alcoholic beverages, education, new health licensing, juvenile laws, day care, transportation, property taxes, and even college science equipment. And more.
