There's something appealing about a sale. Maybe you just want to test your buying skill to see if you really can get something for nothing. Or maybe you believe you're contributing to the family income by saving a few dollars. Whatever your reason for going to a sale, be a wise shopper and get you money's worth.

Before you buy, ask yourself "Why is this item on sale?" See if the reason makes a difference to you. Here's what I mean.

When buying clothing, find out if the style is on its way out. If so you may wish to pass it up. However, if you can wear the garment a great deal right away, it may be an excellent buy.

Also notice if the garment is shopworn, soiled or damaged. The cost of dry cleaning could bring the price back up. On the other hand, if a garment is damaged, a clever seamstress may be able to mend it and get an excellent buy in the bargain.

Know if the item is an irregular or second. Seconds have flaws such as mends, tears or runs that may or may not show or affect wear. Irregulars may have imperfections of color, knit or size.

Perhaps the garment is of a color or style that didn't sell.

But if it looks good on you - it may be an excellent purchase.

Perhaps the price was reduced because only hard-to-sell sizes are left. Under these circumstances, you can often find excellent buys in sample garments or shoes.

By all means, notice the construction. Is a portion of the garment put together wrong? Are the seams ripping out? The person who sews may be able to correct these faults. If you don't sew, the investment may not be a wise one.

Marriage Is.....

By Rev. H.E. Mallison

Marriage is an institution of the human race from time immemorial. All societies from the most primitive have had some means or rules to govern provided in its structure for identifying male and female living together.

In all societies a ritual of some sort from dragging the reluctant maiden from a cave to walking down the aisle has indicated to others in and out of the tribe-hands off. Marriages have been legal, religious, social affirmations of the binding of two people together.

In some lands marriages are contracted by families—the persons never seeing each other until the hour of the ceremony.

In other places common law marriages are recognized or no religious ceremony or papers-legal are used but the community makes provision for its "legality." The present emphasis on "relationships" is not new. But there are rules even in such relationships—the "free love" open marriage is not new either. Even in this country or so called "Christian" countries all one has to do is to read the history of kings, biographies of "important" people, or examine the skeleton in the closets of any family.

A lot of shock is being expressed about the disintegration of marriage as an institution. But 50 per cent of the marriages in this country last until the death of one of the spouses and that AVERAGE length of their marriage is 42 years. That is really something!

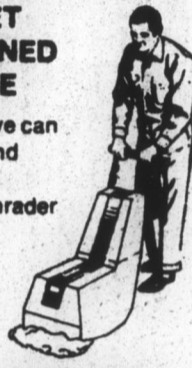

Societal changes make it possible for people to enter marriage because they want and get out of it, too. And most remarry! The problem with marriage is not divorce, it is with our understanding of what it is. Basically marriage has the concept of "binding" two people together. A piece of paper, a minister, priest or rabbi, family or community pressure may help make a marriage possible but doesn't make a marriage.
