CHANCE...The possibility for a state sponsored lottery seems to have gained momentum in recent weeks. Not yet enough momentum for passage, but certainly enough to cause people to take notice and recognize that there is a real chance for passage.

At a public hearing in Raleigh Tuesday of last week, lawmakers heard from both sides of the issue. Opponents of the lottery, primarily Christian activists, labeled the idea "bad business."

Rev. Coy C. Privette, executive director of the Christian Action League and former Republican gubernatorial candidate, called for the lottery's defeat "because it is socially disintegrating, politically corrupt, and morally dangerous."

Certain legislators have expressed caution privately because they do indeed feel that the state involvement and promotion of a lottery could encourage other illegal forms of gambling.

"It would have to be monitored very carefully," said one legislator.

But Loretta M. Martin, the president of the N.C. Association of Educators (NCAE), urged the adoption of a state lottery. Martin suggested using the new funds to "meet the very pressing and unmet needs of public education."

"You can bet they'll (the NCAE) support it as long as they think they're going to get the money," said one senator, but I'm not sure Martin or the NCAE represent the way

North Carolina teachers really feel."

The senator's thoughts about the NCAE have been supported in recent conversations outside of Raleigh, where teachers have confessed that they "feel fortunate just to have a job."

The money from a lottery would be substantial. Estimates at the public hearing last week ranged from $80-million to $100-million per year even after operating expenses and payoffs.

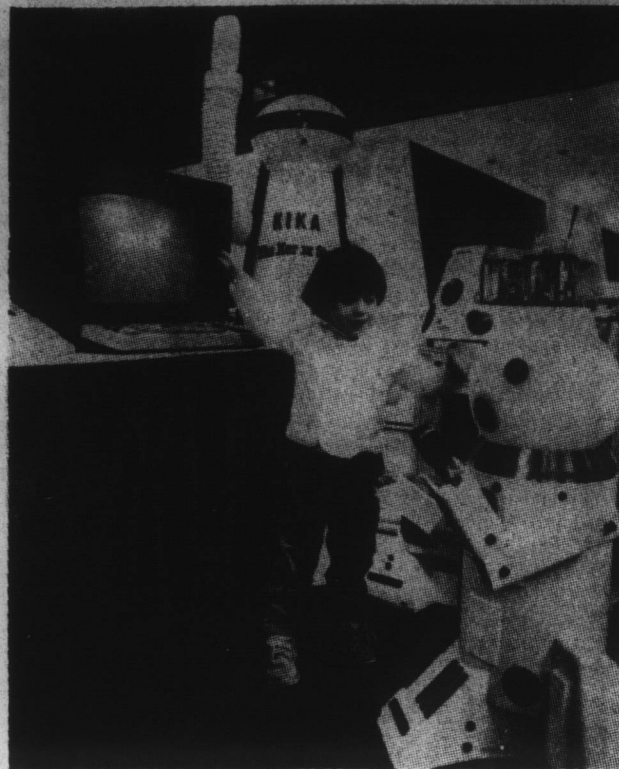

BIGGER CHANCE...Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox "officially" entered an even bigger crap shoot recently when he formally announced his 1984 candidacy for governor.

Adopting the now-prescribed method of flying to several cities across the state for news conferences, Knox stressed that jobs, education, and crime—in that order—were the "three most critical issues facing North Carolina."

Knox now joins former Superior Court Judge Lacy Thornburg of Sylva as the only "officially" announced candidates in the 1984 race.

Meanwhile, State Secretary of Commerce Lauch Faircloth has formed an "exploratory committee" to help him decide whether he should "formally" enter the race.

"Can you imagine being out there on the firing line for so long before the election?" asked one supporter of a candidate who plans to wait a while before announcing.

Mr. Boswell Is Honored

Mr. Elton Boswell was the recipient of the Merchant Of The Year award presented by the Tyner Jaycees at their Installation and Awards Banquet. Mr. Boswell, owner of Boswell's Market located in Tyner, was presented the award by past president of the Tyner Jaycees, Wayne Goodwin. During the presentation Goodwin noted the support Mr. Boswell had given the Jaycees during the past year.

Guest speaker for the banquet was county commissioner Joe Hollowell. Commissioner Hollowell encouraged the Jaycees to continue their service to the community and leave a positive effect everywhere and whenever possible.

President Richard Bunch presented the following awards. Jaycee of the quarter to Brian Phillips, the Project of the Year to Carroll Perry, Officer of the Year to Dennis Chappell and Wayne Goodwin was recipient of the Outstanding Jaycee for 1982-1983.

After the awards presentations, Commissioner Hollowell installed the officers for the upcoming year. Installed were the following: Steve Hare president, Dennis Chappell vice-president, Wesley Layden secretary, Ernest Boyce treasurer, Brian Phillips state director and Jerry Ward local director.

The Tyner Jaycees would like to thank the community for its support during the past year and looks forward to the challenge of community service in the future.

Council To Fund Scholarships

CHAPEL HILL—The N.C. Governor's Business Council on the Arts and Humanities has funded 16 full scholarships to "Managing the Arts," a two-week course in the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill School of Business Administration.

"These scholarships should be of particular benefit to arts administrators from small communities, people who might not otherwise be able to afford to attend the program," said Les Garner, director of the course. "We especially encourage them, and also arts managers in new organizations, to apply."

"Managing the Arts" will begin June 19. To be considered for the scholarships, interested people must complete the program application and an application for the scholarship by May 15.

For applications and information, contact Garner or Julie Might, program assistant, at the UNC-CH School of Business, Carroll Hall 012A, Chapel Hill, N.C. 27514; telephone (919) 962-3123.

Leadership Seminar

If you are a high school student and you want to learn how to be a good leader, the N.C. Leadership Institute for Youth was designed with you in mind.

Scheduled for June 19-24 on the campus of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the institute is planned to help participants develop as individuals and as leaders.

Emphasis will be placed on improving personal development, leading groups of peers, understanding how groups operate and working creatively with others.

Participants should be interested in contributing, learning and, in turn, sharing their knowledge with others, according to institute officials.

Cost for the six-day institute is $59. The fee includes five nights; lodging in the triad area of UNC's North Campus (double occupancy), linens, two banquets, a picnic and administrative costs.

Registration deadline is May 18. Enrollment will be limited to approximately 100 rising high school sophomores, juniors and seniors.

For registration forms, contact Sarah Harris, State Youth Council coordinator, N.C. Youth Involvement Office, 121 W. Jones St., Raleigh, N.C. 27611, or telephone her at 919-733-5966.

The institute is being cosponsored by the Governor's Program for Executive and Organizational Development; N. C. Department of Human Resources, Division of Mental Health, Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse Services; N. C. Department of Public Instruction, Guidance Services; N. C. Peer Helpers Association; N.C. Institute of Government; UNC School of Education, Division of Organizational Development and Institutional Studies; and N. C. State Youth Council, a component of the N.C. Department of Administration's Youth Involvement Office.

Quality Product

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Stressing quality production and unity by all tobacco interests, N.C. Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham, told the Subcommittee on Tobacco and Peanuts of the U.S. House of Representatives Committee on Agriculture here Wednesday that the tobacco program must be preserved.

"My best advice (to you) is to do whatever is necessary to preserve the program in a workable form," Graham said, "and pursue the course of action best benefitting the total tobacco interests."
