

Task Force Efforts To Be Televised

The "high-tech" explosion of the last decade has brought about a disturbing reversal in America's status in the world marketplace. Once preeminent American industries suddenly find themselves playing catch-up with foreign competitors. And a skilled work force finds that many of its skills are no longer required. The challenge to our leaders is to find ways to bring America into the forefront of this technological revolution rather than dealing with the consequences of being its victim.

In May the University of North Carolina Center for Public Television will produce a one-hour news/interview program entitled "Education For Economic Growth", which will examine how a group of concerned political, business and education leaders are working to meet the challenges presented by the high-tech revolution. The program will air May 4 at 8 P.M. on Channel 2 and will be available for distribution nationally on other PBS stations.

The program will focus on the activities of a Task Force on Education for Economic Growth established last December by North Carolina Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr., chairman of the Education Commission of the States.

The group will meet in Research Triangle Park, May 4 to hold its final planning session before presenting its recommendations to the Education Commission of the States and the National Governors Conference later in the summer.

To provide an in-depth look at the issues before the group, the Center will gather a panel of key members of the task force for a news/discussion program to be hosted by national public affairs commentator Martin Agronsky.

Participants will include Gov. Hunt and the task force co-chairmen, Gov. Pierre S. duPont, IV, of Delaware, and Frank Cary, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of International Business Machines Corp. Others on the panel will be Phillip Caldwell, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Ford Motor Company; Dr. Calvin Frazier, commissioner of education of Colorado; Wilhelm Delco, Tx. state representative; Glenn Watts, president of the Communications Workers of America; and Dr. William Friday, president of the University of North Carolina.

Roundtable

ELIZABETH CITY—Headlining Economic Development Day Friday during the Regional Technology Fair at Elizabeth City State University, will be the Economic Development Roundtable. Open to everyone at no cost, the roundtable is sponsored by Northeastern North Carolina Tomorrow.

"We anticipate a good turnout of individuals not only those involved with economic development but also those interested in the future of the region," Joe M. Parker of Ahoskie and NNCT chairman said.

The program will be held at the new Graduate and Continuing Education Center at ECSU. "We expect many of the people attending our annual meeting to also attend the roundtable," Parker added. The annual meeting will also be at the graduate center and features D. M. (Lauch) Faircloth, State Secretary of Commerce, as the keynote speaker at the Thursday evening banquet.

The program for the roundtable discussion includes recognized state leaders in the field and represents a cross-section of state, community corporate and educators officials.

Moderator for the roundtable is Winnie Wood of Camden who heads the NNCT Business, Industry and Tourism Committee.

For more information on the roundtable and the annual meeting, anyone can telephone 335-9491 or write to: NNCT, ECSU Box 5-S, Elizabeth City, N.C. 27808.
