Potts - Leary Nuptials

STANLEY—Miss Rena Marie Potts and Mr. Joseph Lee Leary were united in marriage in the garden of the bride's parents home here at 3 o'clock in the afternoon Sunday.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde J. Potts of Stanley. Her husband, who resides in Knoxville, Tenn., is the son of Mrs. Myrtle W. Leary of Edenton and the late Mr. Curtis T. Leary.

Rev. James R. Potts of Raleigh heard the vows and was assisted by Rev. Milton Hollifield of Stanley. Mr. Danny Potts was pianist and Miss Jean Potts was soloist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a long white peau satin designer gown. The gown was designed with a modified empire bodice and long bishop sleeves. The v-neckline front and very deep v-neckline back were appliqued with imported French re-embroidered Alencon and peau de Ange lace.

The motifs of lace were beautifully applied to the entire bodice and sleeves with special effect effect of a peplin design. A wide cummerbund with a self-fabric large rose accented the back waistline. The very full bias cut skirt held an attached Cathedral length train.

Large designs of French lace in intricate patterning were applied to the skirt and train. Seed pearls outline the lace and detail the lace pattern work on the entire gown. Enhancing the bishop sleeves the lace was used as sheer pattern work.

Rena's head piece was a small brimmed picture hat designed in matching lace and seed pearls, satin fabric hat band and sheer illusion. Mrs. Chris Walsburger of Stanley was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were: Robert Rudisill, Mrs. James Potts and Miss Anie Potts, all of Raleigh. Child attendants were Emily Potts of Raleigh and Adam Walsburger of Stanley.

Mr. Curtis T. Leary, Jr. of Cary was his brother's best

Should Glasses Be Changed?

If you've just started wearing glasses, you may not need to change them again for two or more years. Much depends on your age and the condition of your eyes.

By the time most people reach middle-age, for example, they need glasses to see clearly when reading. The reason for this is that their near-focusing muscles are not as strong as they used to be. This is a natural process, common to most people at that time of life. From middle-age on, it is usually recommended that you have your eyes examined once a year. Often, this will bring a change in prescription and new glasses to adjust to the changing condition of your eyes.

There are other reasons for having annual eye examinations, especially for middle-aged and older people. This is to look for any signs of glaucoma or cataract and other eye problems that may impair vision unless treated in time. But no matter what your age, you should have regular eye examinations to protect your health as well as your eyes.

Too Loose, Lautrec?

You may recall a joke or two based on the famous French painter's name, "Two Loose" (for Toulouse) Lautrec. But it's no joke if you have removable partial dentures that are "too loose."

After several years' wear, sometimes they become so loose that you can lift them in and out with your tongue. Or you may find yourself unconsciously jiggling your tongue against them to see how loose they are. The looser they get, the more temptation it is to jiggle them. It not only is distracting, it can be harmful. If your partial dentures are loose, they aren't doing the job they were intended to do. They aren't providing the dental support you need to keep your natural teeth in good alignment or to help you in chewing food efficiently.

If "too loose" is your problem, there are two things you can do about it, with your dentist's help. You can get a new removable partial denture that will fit properly. Or you can ask him to make a fixed denture (not removable) that will fit into your mouth just like your natural teeth do. Ask your dentist about it.
