"Eye Safety Is No Accident"

What do working on a farm, planting a small garden and cleaning up around the house have in common? According to the National Society to Prevent Blindness-N.C. Affiliate, each poses high risks to unprotected eyes.

"Whether planting a corn field, a backyard vegetable garden or a few rose bushes, eyes must be protected," says Wiley Elliott, eye safety chairman of the N.C. Affiliate. "The Society urges rural farmer and suburbanite to keep eye safety foremost when beginning springtime tasks."

Among the hazards are pesticides, fertilizers and household chemicals which can injure eyes and even blind if eye protection is not worn. Upon contact, many chemicals such as ammonia, can cause instant and severe burns — resulting in permanent vision loss. Product safety instructions, as listed on the package, should be followed. Chemical-type goggles should be worn whenever mixing, applying or spraying the product.

"Lawn mowers, too, can pose eye hazards," the eye safety chairman comments. "Ground debris can be thrown into the face of the operator or a bystander by the mower's blades. Before mowing, fields and lawns should be thoroughly cleared of any ground debris like rocks and twigs."

"When mowing, safety goggles or glasses should be worn. These will protect the eyes against any material that can be flung by the blades. For added protection, the Society suggests that grass catchers be attached to home mowers."

Among the other eye-hazardous activities listed by the Society are hammering with nails, chipping cement or cutting wood. "In all cases, materials can be flung into the eyes, causing injuries," says the eye safety chairman.

The Society points out that safety glasses and goggles are available at most home improvement centers, hardware stores and lumber yards. "Safety eye wear is inexpensive," Elliott adds. "Eye injuries aren't!"

For more information about home and farm eye safety, write for a free copy of the Society's pamphlet, "Eye Safety is No Accident." All requests should be directed to: National Society to Prevent Blindness - N.C. Affiliate, 1033 Wade Avenue, Suite 208, Raleigh, N.C. 27605, and should be accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope.

North Carolina is an affiliate of the National Society to Prevent Blindness. Celebrating its 75th year, the National Society is the oldest voluntary health agency nationally engaged in preventing blindness through a comprehensive program of community services, public and professional education and research.

Museum To Feature Turn-Of-The-Century 'Til Now Swimwear

The Museum of The Albemarle would like to announce that it is looking for swimwear for its summer exhibit "By the Sea". The exhibit will feature swimsuits and beach fashion from the turn-of-the-century 'til now.

From pantaloons and skirts to itty-bitsy, teeny-weeny bikinis, swimwear has changed dramatically. The Museum will show many of these changes in style and fashion in the exhibition. Photo murals of Nags Head cottages and bathers will also be included in the show.

We are asking the public to share with us any early swimsuits that they may have from the turn-of-the-century thru the forties and fifties. Both men and women's swimsuits, bathing shoes and caps, or family photos taken at the beach are needed. So as you change your winter wardrobe to summer, take a look for those old suits that Grandma or "Uncle Herman" use to wear.

The exhibition will be up for the summer, so lenders must be willing to loan the items for three months. If you have any items, please call Barbara Taylor at the Museum at 335-1453 or 335-2987 by May 15, 1983.

Change Your Lifestyle - Live Longer

Do you want to be healthier? Live longer? You can, but you might have to change your lifestyle a little.

Our lifestyle, the way we live, is the major obstacle to our living healthier, longer lives. According to the North Carolina Medical Society, it is also a major force in rising medical costs.

Simple things like fastening our seatbelts could save over 25,000 lives annually. And our other bad health habits are just as much to blame for needless deaths, illnesses and resulting medical care costs. We continue to eat too much, drink too much, smoke too much, and exercise too little.

Our knowledge and behavior are the keys to a longer life. For instance, if science could immediately eliminate cancer, it would add only one year to our average life expectancy. If smoking were stopped, it would add five years.

The solution to our dilemma is contained in the term "preventive medicine." This means learning how to avoid getting sick in the first place rather than relying on treatment after the fact.

According to growing numbers of doctors, little research being carried out today will make any difference in our life expectancy. But educating people on how to take care of themselves will.

Sadly, though, the area which would be most productive is the most resistant to change. Compounded over a period of a lifetime, our lifestyle is responsible for increased rates of heart disease, cancer, and other debilitating conditions. But the nation's two biggest killers, heart disease and cancer could be dramatically curbed if we would only take care of ourselves.

An ounce of prevention is still worth a pound of cure. And it's a lot less expensive.

Card Of Thanks

I would like to thank each and everyone for the many acts of kindness shown me during my stay in the hospitals and since my return home. The beautiful flowers, cards, gifts, phone calls, food and most of all your prayers.

They have meant so much to me and will surely be remembered. May God richly bless you.
