

The Carolina Review

STRANGE . . . Some suspicious and pretty strange circumstances recently in Raleigh may inadvertently put an end to the state (?) probe of Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green's Colcor connections.

Wake County District Attorney Randolph Riley last week took an indefinite leave of absence and checked into a private Winston-Salem psychiatric hospital. No real reasons were given about the problems Riley was having. But for his drive to Winston-Salem "with friends," Riley had some distinguished bodyguards. Trailing behind Riley, in a county car, was Wake sheriff John Baker and two of his top-grade officers (a major and a captain). Wake's chief magistrate also went along. Baker said Riley's friends requested the escort.

Wake taxpayers are not necessarily happy about the heavy-duty entourage. But the governor did move immediately to appoint a local Democratic party activist, Colon Willoughby, to take over for Riley. From all accounts, Willoughby will get some things done that Riley had not been doing. One of those things is to get the Green investigation completed.

Ever since the Columbus County corruption cases surfaced almost a year ago, Jimmy Green's name has been bandied about. Green even charged the FBI with trying to entrap him - with a pretty good story, never refuted by the FBI, to back up his charge.

Then the SBI, under

Green's principle gubernatorial foe Rufus Edmisten, got into the act. Green demanded in a while later that Edmisten either "put up or shut up" with the investigation.

Edmisten supposedly bowed out of the controversy by turning the state investigation over to the local DAs involved - Randolph Riley and the southeastern district's Mike Easley.

Riley soon announced that he was in "no hurry" to finish the investigation and called for more SBI help. That no doubt infuriated Green supporters who have always felt the investigation, especially the longevity, was politically motivated.

Now, the latest reports are that the new DA Willoughby, with Easley's cooperation, wants the case concluded. About time.

AIDS . . . It's not supposed to be in North Carolina, but AIDS has hit at Central Prison in Raleigh. AIDS, Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, is a seemingly incurable disease that strikes mostly homosexuals. There have been only fourteen cases previously reported throughout the state. But two have been reported at Central in recent weeks.

In spite of increasing evidence that AIDS might be creeping outside of the homosexual realm, the disease has yet to receive much attention. A constituent, concerned about this lack of attention, wrote his legislator. "What is AIDS?" the legislator had to ask.

Summer may mean three months at home for many college students. And this can mean disruption of the relative calm in many families.

For example, parents may wisely try to "get to know" their children as they are now - not as the children they once were.

Parents also need to remember that college students have been making their own decisions all year - choosing what they do, where they go, and their own friends. This can make it hard for them to come home to parents who want them to keep the old high school curfew.

Students may have to re-evaluate their expectations of others, too. Their hometowns might not offer the many activities of the university community - calling for some readjustment of leisure time activities.

Many schools provide prepared meals and maid service - and that usually isn't the case in the family living situation.

Both parents and returning students need to realize that their lives have been changing since the family last lived together. And consideration on everyone's part can help make a pleasant summer for the whole family.

— Card Of Thanks —

Perhaps you sang a lovely song
Or sat quietly in a chair.

Perhaps you sent a funeral spray,
If so, we saw it there.

Perhaps you spoke the kindest words,
As any friends could say.

Perhaps you were not there at all,
Just thought of us that day.

Whatever you did to console our hearts,
We thank you so much whatever the part.

Your kind expression of sympathy is gratefully acknowledged and deeply appreciated.
