

JUDGESHIP RUN-OVER CERTAIN

MALLONEE AND MOORE RUNNING CLOSE RACE

Reynolds leading Overman in Tenth District, But Overman's Election Conceded Over State

SECOND PRIMARY SET FOR JULY 3

Weaver and Leatherwood Lead in All Counties, with Haywood County to Be heard From

A run-over primary on July 3rd is certain to be held in the race for Judge of the Superior Court in the 10th judicial district, between J. D. Mallonee of Cherokee County, and W. E. Moore, of Haywood County, according to the returns from all the counties with the exception of Haywood, which county is said to have given both candidates a large vote. An effort was made by The Scout to get the returns from Haywood without success.

The counties of the district gave Reynolds a lead over Overman of 2,300, in the race for United States Senate; and with the exception of Haywood, Leatherwood a lead over Davis for Solicitor of 484, while Weaver led Alley by 1741.

Mr. Mallonee's friends all over the district are urging that he make the run-over race, and they concede his nomination by a large majority. It is understood that he will make the race. It will be between Mr. Mallonee and Mr. Moore.

The tabulated return as secured from reliable sources by the Scout are found elsewhere in these columns.

J. N. ELLIOTT DIES AT ANDREWS HOME JUNE 7th

Funeral Services at Andrews Baptist Church and Interment in Churchyard at Murphy

James Nathaniel Elliott, 64 years old, prominent Andrews merchant and pioneer Cherokee County citizen, died at his home in Andrews on June 7th, of paralysis and high blood pressure. Mr. Elliott suffered the first stroke about three months ago, and later went to Asheville for treatment but doctors there informed him that but doctors could not help him any. About a week ago he suffered the second stroke, which rendered one side completely paralyzed.

Mr. Elliott was a native of Hall County, Ga., and located at Murphy in the year 1885, and at Andrews in 1901. He served as chief of police of both Murphy and Andrews. For many years he conducted a mercantile business at Andrews.

He professed faith in Christ at the age of 19 and joined the Baptist church. He was actively identified with the social, political and religious life of the county and section.

Funeral services were held Wednesday morning at the Andrews Baptist Church by the Rev. T. D. Deitz, of Beta, a former pastor, and interment was in the Baptist cemetery at Murphy. Short tributes were paid the departed by D. H. Tillitt and D. S. Russell, and the large number of sorrowing friends who gathered to pay their last respects, and the many beautiful floral offerings were tributes to the high esteem in which he was held.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Laura Elliott; two sons and a daughter, Herman and Jack Elliott of Andrews, and Mrs. Henry Greene, of Hendersonville; four brothers, H. B. Elliott, of Peachtree; W. Governor Peay Promised Aid To Monroe County

Tennessee Executive Spoke At Tellico Plains; Praised Scenery and Talked Roads

Following are extracts from a news article in The Knoxville Sentinel reporting the recent visit to East Tennessee of Governor Austin Peay. The Governor was the guest of the Tellico Plains Lions Club, and spoke to the people of that section on that occasion:

"The Governor was met at Madisonville by a committee of citizens from Tellico Plains. He was first taken to the old toll gate just beyond Coker Creek where he reviewed the Murphy highway for the purpose of using his influence in getting state aid for this road.

"Governor Peay also visited the Annette Gold Mine and was shown other points of interest."

"The delegation escorted the Governor and his party to the Joe Brown highway. The visitors were much impressed with the beautiful scenery. The governor especially praised the Ball River Falls, where the Tellico River takes a 100 foot dive over a large precipice. Many out of town visitors who recently viewed the scenery along the government highway declare it to be the equal of any they have ever seen."

"The plan for the Knoxville to Murphy, N. C., road was endorsed by the governor. He said that he was very much in favor of it and that he could not see any reason for Monroe County not having state aid on this pike.

"Monroe County, Governor Peay said, is behind in receiving her share of state aid for roads, and he promised his assistance in this matter.

"In conclusion the Governor praised East Tennessee scenery and said that every opportunity he gets, he would slip away and come to East Tennessee."

Transplanting the Folk School to N. C.

BY BRYAN W. SIPE

In the Red Cross Courier, June, 1926. The eyes of educators, sociologists, and social workers are focused on the activities of the experimental folk school established in North Carolina last November. Beginning with nothing but a plot of ground and many willing hands, the work of building the school in the eastern part of Cherokee County has gone steadily forward under the direction of Mrs. John C. Campbell and her co-worker, Miss Marguerite Butler. The dwelling house on the farm is now receiving finishing touches and the museum is under way. The workers have been living on the farm and directing the work at first hand—work done largely by voluntary aid from the people living in the area surrounding the school.

The site of the school is about 8 miles from the town of Murphy, just off a State Highway, which leads to the county seat of the adjoining county of Clay. The school is close to the dividing line between these two counties, Murphy is the railroad point. The school property includes about 75 acres, most of which was donated, principally by Mrs. John O. Scroggs, in order to secure the school for the community. In addition to the land many days of labor, supplies of wood, telephone poles, stone and other building material have been pledged to the school as it may be needed. The people are all native and perhaps of as pure a strain as can be found anywhere in the United States. They are open-hearted, frank and genuine. They are interested in their community and for some time have been advising with friends in Murphy and elsewhere as to how their social and economic condition might be improved. When it was learned that a folk school was to be established somewhere in the Southern Appalachians they were enthusiastic and, at their request, Miss Marguerite Butler was sent to make preliminary investigations and report to Mrs. Campbell. She came, held two public meetings, visited the homes, talked with the people individually. She was so impressed with their earnestness and with the general economic and social conditions of the section that she brought Mrs. Campbell to look over the ground.

Sites in several other States touching the Appalachians were being considered, but soon after Mrs. Campbell's arrival, announcement of the location of the school in the Brantstown section of Cherokee and Clay Counties was made. Both Mrs. Campbell and Miss Butler have been there since that time laying the foundation for the school.

The school is to be conducted so far as feasible on the Danish folk school plan. Mrs. Campbell and Miss Butler spent two years in Scandinavia in preparation for the founding of a school in the Southern Appalachians. In the establishment of the school Mrs. Campbell is carrying forward the work of her late husband, who so well understood the needs of the people of the Southern Appalachians, and who had planned to make a study of the schools of Denmark, Sweden, and Norway preparatory to bringing their best things to this section. The World War interfered and before the plan could be started Mr. Campbell died. Mrs. Campbell thereupon took up the work. This folk school is for adults between the ages of 17 and 35 years. It is the plan to bring the students together into one big family of no more than 100 for a course of training covering one to two years. If the Danish idea can be carried out as is planned, the lessons will consist largely of singing in groups, lectures on economics, social, and agricultural sciences, and studies of nature in this section. The duties incident to its operation will be divided among those attending the school. It is expected that the school will achieve its greatest good through de-
