WRITES OF FLORIDA STORM

The following letter was recently received by Mrs. M. McCay, who is spending some time in Murphy at the Dickey House, from her daughter in Palm Beach.

A letter from Mr. and Mrs. Frank Coleman is also given.

Mother Darling:

I know you are thinking that I might have written sooner but honey its just impossible to tell you how unsettled, excited, confused, everything has been.

But they will come back! You know the Florida spirit. It just takes a setback to slow it up and already every individual is getting on his feet.

Dear Editor Scout: We've just gotten the dear old Scout and read Mr. Hawkins letter about the storm and wish to say that he did not exaggerate one bit, but we are happy to say that it was a mistake about us all being killed.

At Moorehaven, however, it is different. The water is yet several feet deep. (Lake Okeechobee overflowed here.) The dead have been left, probably close to a hundred, to the buzzards.

The officers, members and friends of the Christian Neighbors Business League, wish to thank the many friends, both white and colored, for their contributions toward the establishment of an Industrial School and Orphanage in Texas.

his arms—he had managed to save for it through all those awful hours in the tree-top.

There will be more deaths from injuries and exposure but the awful depression (depression caused by such a calamity) is already lifted.

Why prosperity?

IT is a fact of history that the famous nations of the past have made their greatest contributions to civilization only after the attainment of prosperity or economic health.

For what are the benefits of national prosperity but the betterment of public health, the improvement of all forms of education, and the growth of those cultural influences which make life richer for all?

The prosperity of the South is today an accomplished fact, and, in the light of history, its promise for the future of the South is great.

The prosperity of southern communities is definitely bound up with the prosperity of the southern railroads. The Southern Railway System regards its present good credit and earning power as an opportunity to assist in the preservation of the general welfare of the South in the years that lie ahead.
