PUT COWS ON FULL SCHEDULE

If we were to pick any one thing above all others that is responsible for the lack of satisfactory profits—or even actual losses—in the dairy industry, we would blame the average dairyman's failure to run his business according to modern manufacturing methods.

The owner of dairy cows is really operating a milk factory. His factory is his barn. His raw materials are feed and water. His cows are machinery and labor.

If the average farmer were put at the head of a large automobile factory, he no doubt would do what other manufacturers do—he would produce the most cars at the lowest possible cost to sell when the demand is highest.

Why should he not adopt a similar system in operating his dairy? Demand for milk is at its highest in late fall and winter, and consequently prices are best at those times. It is a fact that milk production can be definitely planned to reach its peak during late summer and early fall.

If cow owners fully realized that what they give their cows to eat now will determine milk yield several months from now, not many of them would rely on late summer pasture for their ration, because cows cannot get enough nourishment from it to bring them into the fall feeding season in good condition.

Dr. C. H. Eckles, Chief of the Division of Dairy Husbandry at the University of Minnesota, and one of the world's leading authorities, says in his book "Dairy Cattle and Milk Production":

"In many localities, a dry period, often of several weeks, occurs in the middle or latter part of the summer, and the pastures become short and insufficient to maintain a full flow of milk. This season is often the critical time of the year for the dairy cow. It is probable that as much loss occurs in one year by lack of feed at this time as occurs from improper feeding during the winter season. As long as the cattle are on pasture and the field work is pressing, the tendency is to let the cows get along the best way they can."

Practical experience has proved that a grain ration with pasture throughout the entire summer pays for itself many times over. But it is even more imperative that dairymen put their cows back on a full grain ration earlier in the fall than most of them are accustomed to doing. Men who are operating dairy farms at a profit every year have demonstrated this fact beyond doubt.

Run-Down gave out easily. MY health wasn't any account at all," says Mrs. H. L. Cayton, of Washington, N. C. "I would start to do my housework and I would give out before I had done anything at all. I did not have any strength, and if I did the least thing it seemed to tax me so I could not finish. I was run-down sure enough. Several of my friends had taken Cardui and they said to me, 'Why don't you try it?' I knew I needed something to build up my general health and to increase my strength. Finally one day when I was recovering from a spell of sickness, I decided to try Cardui. I got a bottle and began to take it. I could notice that I was improving as my appetite got better and I did not give out nearly so quick. I took several bottles and I felt lots better. Two years ago I decided to take it again. It built me up and made me feel like a different person. It is the grandest medicine for women that I know anything about."
