Bean Beetle Advances To Cover The State

At the close of 1926, the Mexican Bean Beetle had advanced eastward in North Carolina to a position along the main line of the Southern Railway in piedmont North Carolina.

This year, the beetle is expected to spread through Caswell, Alamance, Randolph, Chatham, Montgomery, Moore, Anson and Union counties. The bean beetle first entered North Carolina in 1921 when it invaded parts of Cherokee and Clay counties in the western limits of the State. Since that time it has gradually spread eastward and will in time cover the entire State. Like many other destructive pests this one came from Mexico and for 75 years has been a serious insect pest of beans in the southwest. The bean crop of this state has been severely damaged and growers may continue to expect severe infestation.

According to C. H. Brannon, extension entomologist at State College, growers are urged to familiarize themselves with the appearance and habits of the bean beetle and to study the latest control methods. Under favorable conditions the beetle will increase at an enormous rate and will totally destroy a crop of beans unless control measures are used.

The bean beetle looks like an enlarged lady bug. It is light yellow in color just after emerging but soon turns to a copper color. There are eight black spots on each wing or sixteen black spots on the back of the beetle. The eggs are orange colored and are laid on the undersurface of the leaves in masses of from 40 to 60. The eggs hatch in from five to fourteen days depending on the temperature.

Mr. Brannon states that bean plants are very sensitive and are easily injured by sprays or dusts that are too caustic. Magnesium arsenate, calcium fluosilicate are the three materials that may be used successfully in control of the pest without injuring the bean vines. Exact methods of using these materials are given in Extension Folder 22 issued by the extension service of State College and copies may be had free of charge on application.

FORMAL OPENING OF NEW HOTEL GENERAL LENOIR

Lenoir City, June 30.—The new Hotel General Lenoir was formally opened to the public on last Friday evening with one of the most elaborately planned affairs held here in some time. The feature of the evening was the after-dinner speaking program in which Robert C. Leonard of Chattanooga, and Hammond Fowler of Rockwood took leading parts.

A feature of unusual interest was the introduction to the guests of Mrs. George M. Burdette, great, great granddaughter of General William Lenoir, Revolutionary War Hero, for whom the hotel was named. She is 75 years old but very active, and enjoyed the occasion as much as anyone.

Other entertainment features of the evening included orchestra music by Polly's El Seans, and some character sketches and songs by Harry Williams of Atlanta. T. M. Breazeale local attorney and President of the Chamber of Commerce served as Toastmaster.

More than 200 guests from all parts of East Tennessee were present, and the festivities of the evening closed with a dance in the J. C. Penney Company's Store, a part of the new Hotel, with music by the local seven-piece orchestra, Polly's El Seans.

The Hotel General Lenoir which is a three story building, is the most modern business structure in Lenoir City, and one of the finest hotels to be found anywhere in a town of this size. It is thoroughly modern in detail, and contains fifty guest rooms
