Lifting romance of Vienna borne on the wings of music, leads us to "The Night Is Young," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayers' glamorous new love story with songs coming Wednesday and Thursday to the Murphy Theatre. The creation of Oscar Hammerstein II and Sigmund Romberg, who says they would "New York's finest song and other outstanding notes, is a leading story of the Imperial Ballet, in which graceful, heart-appealing and gorgeous song hits are blended into a dramatic theme. Based on an original story by John Galsworthy, "Grand Hotel" is produced by Eugene O'Neil and Frank Selznick. It stars the lovely Miss Gandy, who was a winner in the 1934 Broadway production of "Grand Hotel." A Brilliant Cast. "The Barbers," "The Day and the Night," and "The Night Is Young." "The Night Is Young" is a musical comedy in three acts. The story is set in a Parisian cafe where a young man who won an outstanding success in "The Night Is Young," Miss Paula, and her recent hit, "Evening." An elaborate cast includes Edward Everett Horton and Eva Marie, who starred in "The Merry Widow." Charles Butterworth, Donald Cook, Henry Stephenson, Rosalind Russell, Herman Bing, Charles Joffe and Albert Conti. Novarro plays a young archduke and Miss Lay, a Viennese ballerina. Gorgeous scenes in the Royal Opera, in the emperor's palace, the Fontaine, great amusement park of Vienna, in quaint Viennese wine-gardens and other continental play-places, figure in the haunting blend of music, comedy, romance and drama. Song hits include "The Night Is Young," "My Old Mare," "There's a Girl in Havana," "Lena, I Love You," "Though I Am a Noble Duchess," "Vienna Will Sing," "Wieder Schultze" and "When I Grow Too Old to Dream." Dramatic Highlights. Dramatic highlights include the gay night at the Prater, the love sequence in the Ferris wheel, the romantic interludes in the wine-garden, the dramatic quarrel between the archduke and the emperor, the gala night at the Imperial Ballet, the comical rehearsals, backstage, the episode in the Gypsy dive, and the never-to-be-forgotten musical and poignant drama are remarkably blended.

The entrances to many Stanly County farms are taking on a more attractive appearance since the farm naming and mail box improvement started few weeks ago. In place of the old boxes formerly found, there are neat, well-constructed mail boxes accompanied by attractive signs bearing the name of the farm and of the owner. Most of the farmers are selecting picturesque names suggestive of the nature of the farms, the products raised on the farms or the family name. A few examples: Sugar Bush, Oak Grove, Elm Hill, Green Hill, Sandy Lake, Mountain View Farm, Sunnyside, Appleton, Sunnyside, and Lakeview. The contest, sponsored by the Agricultural Extension Service, will close April 30. Prizes of $100.00 worth of supplies will be awarded to the winners, and the winners will receive a certificate of appreciation. The winners will be selected according to the appropriateness and attractiveness of the farm name and the mail box, the durability of the construction of the box and sign, and the general appearance of the yard around the box and the entrance to the farm. The shrubbery offered as prizes will be delivered next fall in time for setting out during the most advantageous season. It has been donated by Moore's Truck Farm, Concord; Meroney Nursery Company, Mocksville; The Howard Hickory Nursery, Hickory; and Lindley Nurseries, Greensboro. to be poor and the ears will not fill out well. The leading variety of sweet or sugar corn is Golden Sunshine, Country Gentleman, and Sugar Wills Evergreen.

Timely Farm Questions

Question: How much milk should I add to my poultry feed to produce milk-fed broilers? Answer: Two pounds of either skimmilk or buttermilk should be added to each pound of the fattening ration and fed during a fattening period of 7 to 10 days. The milk and ration is mixed so as to make a sloppy feed that will pour readily from a bucket. During the first two days of the fattening period, feed only as much as the birds will consume in 15 minutes twice a day. After the second day give them all they will clean up in 20 to 30 minutes two or three times a day. Only enough water to quench the thirst should be given twice a day during the fattening period. Question: How can I put an oil finish on my furniture? Answer: All dust should be removed from the furniture before any finish is applied. A thin coat of a mixture of two parts of boiled linseed oil and one part of turpentine is then brushed on the surface. After this coat is thoroughly dry it is rubbed down with fine steel wool. For light finishes use white shellac and for darker finishes use orange shellac. Shellac coats should be repeated until the wood pores are filled. Rub down each coat thoroughly. After the last application of shellac is rubbed down the surface is then waxed and polished. Question: How much sweet corn should be planted for family of five? Answer: Approximately 600 feet of row will produce enough corn for the average family of five. The corn however, should be planted in blocks, containing several rows rather than two or three long rows. Where long rows are planted pollination is apt

Advertisement for Citizens Bank & Trust Co. Text: 'THE UNIMPORTANCE OF BANKING MUCH has recently been heard about the "importance of banking" and the "need for leadership from the bankers." Apparently there exists a widespread belief that commercial banks originate or create business. A moment's reflection makes it obvious that in the very nature of things this cannot be true. Barter and trade came first. Commerce in one form or another existed long before banking. Only when trade became complicated and far-reaching, did banking machinery become necessary to facilitate it. Commercial banks of deposit are the channels through which the stream of business flows, not the source from which it arises. Without the activity of the farm, the factory and the merchant, the banker would have nothing to do. Today the banks are ready to do their part in facilitating business. This is their livelihood and their reason for existence. They have abundant resources for that purpose. But it is useless to look to them to create a revival of commerce. This is a function which they cannot perform. CITIZENS BANK & TRUST CO. Member Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation ANDPEWS MURPHY
