APRIL

By Helen Bayley Davis

Hush—April is in the lane!
Be very still, she may go again;
The touch of her lilac scented hand

Is on my cheek.
Do not speak
To her, she may not understand;
She is shy, and white, and very fair.

Look—she leaves a crocus—there!
The daffodils awake, and stir;
Above my head there is a whir
Of blue, blue wings . . . Oh, I am glad

She is here! See—
By the wild plum tree
She pauses; soon it will be clad
In petals, fluttering like blown white tulle . . .
April, you are too beautiful!
