HUBERT WELLS

By Richard McIver
My children, and I will tell the same hunter named Hubert to hunt, and he liked to hold a knife down in his boot.
One day, far toward the end of the season, he had him a possum on which to walk, and he walked, and he walked till night, being no possum, he took a look around, he said, "I'm glad if I were to see a ghost?" Hubert turned round, and began to run,
in his fright, he left his gun.

and he ran, "till his legs gave out, then sat down and began to
sob, sobbed and shouted till he was hoarse,
he knew right then he was off his chaise.
He was now growing late, and his legs were annoyed, he went to search, and were perjoyed,
they stumbled over him by surprise,
picked him up and made him rise.

took him home, and put him in bed, next morning his father took him to the shed,
and himself a fine hickory limb, long and slick, and slimb and slim he saw, when Hubert's father was there, were great big stripes all over his son,
and poor Hubert went hunting no more,
his legs and his back were so sore.

CHRISTMAS TIME

By Reba Hickman
Christmas time is the jolliest time, things both old and new,
the merry bells of earth shall chime, brings glad tidings to me and you.
Santa comes to children gay, fill their sock from top to toe, they rise on Christmas day, happy they will be you know.
they find the Christmas tree full of pleasing things, make the children go, "Tee-hee", thank old Santa for what he brings.
glad we are to receive,
the best of all is to give,
happily you will be relieved as you shall live.
and receive are happy things to do
should all give to the poor,

THE CITY SQUARE

By Catherine Moore
Why do we have the City square?
Why do people think it so rare?
Why do we tide it up?
With all sorts of beautiful stuff?
Why did Miss Courtney make the chains?
And put them up in the rain.
She made them out of ever greens
To make the square a pretty scene.
Who put up the pretty red and green light?
To make it so pretty at night?
Miss Fuller had her classes to bring The ever greens and everything.
The civic classes brought holly and berries;
And every thing to make it so merry.
Miss Fuller and Miss Courtney too Did the best they could do.
I think the City and the Town And every place close around should thank the Murphy High school For getting up such a pretty view.
