SPRING

(Thomas Burke Gray)
 Along about this time o' year,
 I always feel a thrill,
 When the Jonquils are a-bloomin'
 With the Jum-ups on the hill;
 And in the distant meadows,
 The Robin and the Lark
 Are singin' while the violets
 Are peekin' in the Park.
 The buds are burstin' in the trees
 And busy bees buzz there
 And perfume from the burstin' buds
 Is spilled out on the air.
 The vines are greenin' at the door
 Of every cottage small,
 While lonely Catbirds in the trees
 To other Catbirds call.
 The Mockin'-bird, oh, sweeter sings
 Than e'er he sang before,
 When in the grayin' light of dawn
 He sings before my door!
 The Cardinal has plumed his crest,
 And Blackbirds passin' thru,
 Are singin' to their hearts' content
 To ears that hear anew;
 For Spring her magic wand takes up
 To weave a magic spell,
 And every green thing in the fields
 Begins to burst or swell.
 The rain has almost washed away
 Debris that winter left,
 And Buttercups begin to peep
 From every rocky cleft.
 Oh! it's a time when hearts are glad,
 And every heart must sing,
 Or pluck a lover's melody
 On instrumental string.
 Then when the evenin' stars come out
 And peacefully we sit,
 We watch across the meadows wide
 While other lamps are lit.
 The day is done. The organ plays
 To guide us as we sing
 The new, yet still the old, old song,
 The lovely Song of Spring.
