MY DOG AND I

By Isla Paschal Richardson

You sit beside my chair. Your gaze Unwavering and deep shines through
A shaggy fringe of hair. I shrink—
Unworthy of your estimate
Of me, your steadfast loyalty.
What are the thoughts behind those clear
And searching eyes? My enemies
And friends both see me as I am—
A mortal full of frailties.
And you, whose love would follow me
Into the deepest pit of woe,
I wonder if you do not see beyond
The erring human self of me,
Beholding all the good I would Embody, all the heights I seek,
Yet unattained? Do you look through
The failures and mistakes and see Me as the man I want to be?
