

Winter Peas Crops Worth More Than $3 Acre Payment

Thousands of North Carolina farmers are sowing Austrian winter peas this fall in order to complete their AAA soil building units. They hope eventually to receive a payment of $3.00 per acre for turning under the legume.

E. C. Blair, Extension agronomist of N. C. State College, says the far-sighted farmer will sow winter peas even though he has earned all his Triple-A soil building units. "The peas pay much bigger dividends than the $3 per acre government payment," he asserted.

Using tests carried out by farmers in 1941 as the basis for his statement, Blair said that winter peas turned under in the spring will increase the yield of corn that follows as a summer crop by $15 worth per acre.

In Bertie County, W. J. Mizelle turned under a crop of Austrian winter peas and produced 48 bushels of corn per acre without fertilizer. Adjoining land of the same type, where no peas were turned under, yielded 28 bushels of corn per acre. The latter field received 250 pounds of 3-8-3 fertilizer and 50 pounds of nitrate of soda per acre.

R. R. Rouse of Lenoir County made 44 bushels of corn on land where peas were turned under, and 19 bushels per acre on a field where no legume was grown.

On black swamp land in Pamlico County, John Cowell grew a fine crop of peas last winter. They were turned under and the corn that followed made 70 bushels per acre. The corn was not fertilized. An adjoining field yielded 40 bushels per acre, without peas.
