On The Home Front

We're going to see a lot less of the tin can, which is going through this war primarily as a container of meat and vegetables. Already WPB has halved the amount of tin which may be used in cans for baking powder, beer, biscuits, candy, cereals, flour, chocolate and cocoa, dog food, spices, condiments, petroleum products, tobacco.

There's been a lot of beer poured into tins. In 1941 beer cans consumed 1,600 tons of scarce tin—more than was used to can any vegetable except tomatoes.

Along with the cans, WPB is drafting a part of their contents, plans an order withholding a percentage of the 1942 fruit and vegetable pack as a reserve for the armed forces and Lend-Lease.

Sales of sugar may be limited to three-quarters of a pound per person per week. That's enough.

There'll probably be enough of the commoner spices, except cinnamon. We've more than two years supply of East Indian pepper in the warehouses.

WPB found it possible to relax restrictions on fats and oils. A break for makers and users of salad oils, shortening, lard, soaps, paint.

Women's styles probably will be altered by the need to conserve all kinds of cloth, chances are we're in for a period of slim silhouettes and still shorter skirts. Only a limited amount of crude rubber will be available for foundation garments, girdles, corsets. Manufacturers will conserve by design changes, partial substitutions.

As for coats and dresses, the plan is to blend used and reworked wool with cotton, rayon, and virgin wool. There'll be only cotton stockings. Silk socks are virtually used up, most of the nylon supply will soon be needed for military purposes.

As for women and war work, Uncle Sam does not want "a broad wave of knitting that will consume millions of pounds of wool needed for more essential purposes." It does want women to knit sweaters when commanding officers have asked for them. To be sure, ask the Red Cross. Director Sidney Hillman says more than a million women will be needed for work in war industry. The nation's more than 3,600 women pilots were called "indispensable" to the Civil Air Patrol. This patrol, organized by the Office of Civilian Defense, invites college flyers and aviation followers to join up. Training courses are being prepared.

Having cut the output of radios and radio-phonographs by more than 40 per cent—and there probably are still further cuts ahead. Steps also have been taken to reduce production of "non-essential" incandescent lamps by 50 per cent.

OPA has begun a checkup of dealers in new tires and tubes throughout the country to find out who has been breaking rationing regulations, and WPB's Industrial Conservation Bureau has launched a drive on auto boneyards. The goal: five or six million old cars in six months for scrap metal. Not a single ounce of aluminum is to be available for private use. The country's entire supply has now been marshalled for war.
