Picking Parasites Newest War Game, Started by F. D. R.

Word from Washington states that when President Roosevelt told Washington pressmen that the "parasites" should be driven out of over-crowded Washington and that 20-room houses on Massachusetts Avenue should be taken over for workers who couldn't find rooms he started a new game that the National Capital found as entertaining as the President's birthday balls.

One Washington newspaper published a long, dull and serious editorial in defense of "suspects," and it was a perfect vindication for some very dear ladies, including Mrs. William Howard Taft, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth. All the other newspapers made a game out of the President's remarks about there being too many people here "to watch the show."

A retired General and a retired Admiral collaborated and protested that they must stay in Washington and see to it that "this nonsense about the Army and Navy cooperating is pigeon-holed."

An intelligent taxi-driver observed that "as I get it they want room for more clerks to do the work the clerks they have got ain't doing."

A society leader protested: "So now I am a parasite, am I? After eight years of feeding lipping New Dealers until I am bustle-bound myself. I wish I had my anchovies back."

A policeman: "I dont know anything about these Termites, but I do want to be on the detail that sees to it that girls are put to bed at 10 o'clock every night, the way one of our smart Congressmen suggests."

A taxpayer observed that "it don't make any difference to me, brother; my number is up any way you figure."

A number of rich, or lucky, political parasites were put on the spot. "Were their faces red" when the great newspapers used their names as horrible examples, with plenty of unwelcome advice about what to do with their 20-room houses, their spare time and their money?

"Picking parasites" is a great game. It can be played everywhere—right in your own community, with friends and neighbors.

But don't get tough because some one may make jokes about you.

A Report To The Nation

Washington, D. C.

The war production story of the past eighteen months and what the United States must do to achieve its potential overwhelming arms superiority is detailed in a Report To The Nation just issued by Archibald MacLeish, Director of the Office of Facts and Figures. The report was prepared at the request of President Roosevelt.

Only "by the mobilization of every available man, woman, dollar and thing—every plant, tool, machine and bit of material" can an adequate production structure be built, says the report.

Among the high-lights of war production in the United States since the fall of France are:

The foundation has been laid for an armanent program of a magnitude no other nation ever has attempted.

Nearly three times as many weapons and supplies of war will be produced this year as in the eighteen months between June, 1940, and the end of 1941.

This year of production of planes and tanks will equal that of Hitler in all the years before 1933 when he was preparing to conquer the world. Goods from the arsenal of democracy are flowing or will flow to all corners of the earth where the soldiers and sailors of democracy fight the Axis.

The United States production program, as described in the Report to the Nation, covers every phase of the war: The Army and the Navy, planes, tanks, ordinance, munitions, shipments throughout the world under the Lend-Lease Act, construction and expansion of new plants and conversion of existing plants.

The report tells the story of ship construction and repair. It describes the degree to which more workmen are needed in war industries and the plans for recruiting and training them. The part played by science in the war against the Axis is also described.

The report constantly stresses the fact that a start, only, has been made. For military reasons it cannot reveal the exact number of planes, tanks or ships being built. Yet the rate of building is impressive. Production of tanks and other combat vehicles is now more than three times as large as a year ago; guns of all types nearly five times as large.

Army warplane production, the report states, has been stepped up to the point where, with Great Britain, we soon shall exceed the plane output of the Axis countries. More important, we shall have the plant capacity to increase our production to the point where we can seize control of the air in all areas of the world struggle.

Not only this, the report continues, but the Army now has "four types of combat planes—better than anything yet produced abroad." In short, the Army's story is one of equipment of all kinds as well as housing for an ultimate army of 7,000,000 men, the largest in the history of the nation.

The Navy, fighting the aggressor in the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, is rapidly becoming a two-ocean fighting force instead of the traditional one-ocean combat unit. Fifteen battleships are being built, 11 aircraft carriers, 54 cruisers, 193 destroyers and 73 submarines.

The Navy has 2,000 new airplanes and work is being pushed day and night on its new bases, air stations, docks and other facilities. Merchant shipping, equally vital in the war against Germany, Japan and Italy, will soon be augmented at a rate of two ships a day; the building of ships in World War II dwarfs the program of World War I.

When the program is in full swing an army of 700,000 men will be building ships in the United States. Already contracts have been sighted for 999 ships. Added to this building program is the task of getting men to operate the new merchant fleet. Crews must be found for about 800 ships, so 25,000 seamen and 6,300 officers are to be trained for this service.

The complexity of modern war production is described in the Report. Not only must essential raw materials be brought from all parts of the world; new ones must be developed. So the "production of the tools of war is an endless struggle to build new factories and expand existing ones; to convert the machinery of peace to the purposes of war. Government and private industry have joined hands to invest a total of 7 billion dollars in plant construction and expansion.

Steel ingot capacity is to be increased by 10,000,000 tons, aluminum production by 700,000 pounds a year and magnesium production by 350,000,000 pounds. But even these totals are inadequate for the 1943 objective of 125,000 airplanes a year.

Machine tools, without which the whole program would bog down, were being produced at a rate of only 150,000,000 dollars a year before France fell. This year the total should reach 12 billion dollars.

Plant conversion and the adjustment of small business to war production is under way, the report states, but the difficulties have been great.

No part of the program would be possible without the workers who battle long hours and arduously for the Army and Navy at the front.

"The first conquest of the Nazis," says the Report to the Nation, "was the conquest of their own people." The Reich factories which belch forth the armaments of aggression are run by slaves. The factories of democracy must be run by free men, holding dear to their right to work for whom they please under conditions which satisfy them.

There were strikes. Priceless time, never to be regained, was lost. But now representatives of the CIO and the A. F. of L. have given a pledge against strikes and the employers have promised that there shall be no lock-outs in essential industries. A War Labor Board is to pass promptly on all grievances.

Equally vital is an increasing supply of workers skilled in the technical processes of war manufacturing. Five million workers have already been drawn into the production program; within six months an additional 5,000,000 will be needed. The existing industrial army must be trebled by the end of the year and quadrupled by the close of 1944.

Some shortages will be unavoidable, but a training program of unprecedented size will furnish most of the needed men and women. Already nearly 2,500,000 workers have been taught to run the machines which produce the goods of war. Labor unions have been scouting the country for former members who because of the depression, became filling station operators or entered other less essential trades.

A final aspect of the production problem described by the Report to the Nation is that of transportation. "It is not enough to produce the goods of war. They must be moved, and moved swiftly, by rail, by air, by truck, by boat to their destination."

This is being accomplished by new cars and locomotives and by more efficient use of existing equipment. But the added freight which must be moved this year will strain the railroads and the truck lines of the nation to a breaking point.
