MAKE Fewer Calls EVERY DAY

In wartime, war needs must have right-of-way. This includes fast telephone service for war agencies and industries producing war weapons.

To provide this service, long distance and local telephone lines, now crowded with the greatest volume of calls in history, must be kept clear of non-essential messages. Ordinary peacetime uses of the telephone must yield right-of-way to war business.

If times were normal, we would build facilities to handle this growing volume of calls, but today, materials needed for telephone construction are going to war—where all of us are glad to have them go.

Therefore we are asking telephone users to make fewer long distance and local calls so as to help keep telephone lines clear for vital war calls.

How You Can Help

Long Distance Calls

Make only the most necessary long distance calls.

Place your calls before 9 a. m.; between noon and 2 p. m.; 5 and 7 p. m.; or after 9 p. m.

Stay near your telephone after you have placed your call.

Plan what you want to say to make your conversation as brief as possible.

Whenever possible, call by number.

Local Calls

Use your telephone sparingly—avoid unnecessary calls.

Be sure to replace your receiver on the hook.

Look up numbers you are not sure of and help avoid the calling of wrong numbers.

Make your conversations brief.

Caution your servants against needless use of the telephone.
