COMMENTS ON HERE AND HEREAFTER

Recently it was the writer's privilege to conduct a very remarkable eight-day evangelistic campaign in the Churchill Tabernacle in the city of Buffalo, New York. Twenty-five years ago Billy Sunday, under the sponsorship of practically all the churches of the city of Buffalo, held there a great six weeks' tabernacle meeting. There were many conversions in the Sunday revival. One of the conversions was a young business man named Clinton Churchill. Mr. Churchill probably had as bright a business future as any young man of his age on the American continent. He turned from this business career to become a preacher of the Gospel, which in his own life had proved to be the power of God unto salvation. Mr. Churchill is still a good business man. His ministerial work is carried on in a business-like way. After being converted, Churchill built the first radio station in the city of Buffalo, and at one time he controlled four radio stations. He now broadcasts the Gospel every week over a 50,000 watt station. He has a great tabernacle which is a center of testimony to which people come to hear the Gospel and from which the message of the Gospel goes out over the air to many thousands of people living in a number of states.

While preaching in the Churchill Tabernacle there came to the mind of the writer the thought that practically every great city in America has in it some one outstanding man who is preaching the Gospel to great crowds—crowds which assemble Sunday after Sunday. Most of these ministers preach this same Gospel to thousands of people who listen in over the radio. Sometimes Christian leaders become discouraged because there are so many empty churches, but these Christian leaders should remember that more people are hearing the Gospel today than ever heard it in the history of the world. When Billy Sunday had his campaign in Buffalo he probably preached to ten thousand people daily. Mr. Churchill, one of the converts of Mr. Sunday's Buffalo meeting, is preaching to at least a quarter of a million people every Sunday.

In the old days when the writer would address an audience of five thousand people in a big tabernacle somewhere, the paper next day would have a headline across the top of the first page to the effect that Bob Jones addressed an audience of five thousand people yesterday. Now it is the privilege of the writer, while still speaking to rather large audiences in many parts of America, to broadcast the Gospel in person and by electrical transcription over approximately one hundred fifty radio stations in the United States, Canada, Alaska, China, and South America. In the old days we preached to from five to ten thousand people a day. Now we preach to millions of people every week. The Gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. It doesn't say it is the power of God if it is preached in church on Sunday morning or in a tabernacle in a big evangelistic campaign.

The Gospel, which we have had the joy of preaching over the radio, has produced some of the most remarkable conversions we have ever had under our ministry. There are types of people who hear the Gospel over the radio who never heard it in the old days in big union evangelistic campaigns. The writer should like to suggest that Christian people everywhere pray especially for Clinton Churchill, Charles Fuller, and all the rest of our crowd who are giving the Gospel over the radio to hungry-hearted people in this time of world distress.

Railroads Move 800,000 Barrels Of Oil Per Day

As examples of how one railroad is doing its bit to protect the American way of life—"our heritage of freedom; our right to govern ourselves"—Ernest E. Norris, president of the Southern Railway System, points out that in the first eight months of this year, the Southern Railway System alone handled more than 19,000,000 barrels of oil to the North and East.

"When the oil shortage developed in the eastern states", Mr. Norris explained, "the railroads said that they could move 200,000 barrels a day to meet the emergency. They are now moving more than 800,000 barrels a day."
