... and make a wish!

This is not Aladdin's lamp. It's just an ordinary railroad lantern. And yet...

Tonight, railroaders will swing lanterns like this all along the 8,000-mile Southern Railway System. And at their signals, long freight trains will start moving, roll out of yards and across the miles.

Loaded into the cars will be vast quantities of things to fulfill the wishes of folks in the South. There will be building materials, food, coal, clothing, machinery... all kinds of supplies and equipment for farms, factories, stores and homes.

Yes, a wave of the lantern at night... or hand and flag signals in daytime... sets in motion the magic of mass transportation... the dependable, economical, all-weather transportation service of the Southern Railway System. And that isn't all...

The Southern also "Serves the South"... and helps it to grow and prosper... by giving jobs to 50,000 Southerners... by paying taxes that help support police and fire departments, schools and other public services... and by purchasing the products of Southern mines, forests, factories and farms.

That's why we say "make a wish"—and if you wish for an even better and greater Southland, you'll find that the Southern Railway System is working with you... helping to make your wish come true.
