Some goals the American farmers are trying to meet in 1946 are: 68,875,000 acres of wheat, 97,000,000 acres of corn, 2,780,000 acres of potatoes, 46,000,000 acres of oats, and 20,000,000 acres of cotton.

Neighboring TOWNS Are Calling MORE THAN EVER

If you've experienced a delay recently on a call to a nearby town, you may have wondered why, since most of your calls to more distant places are going through promptly. Here's the answer:

Between nearby towns and cities, folks are calling more than ever . . . one-fifth more calls today than during even the peak of the wartime load. The resulting occasional congestion will be relieved as rapidly as materials can be secured and additional circuits provided.

Prompt, Proper Cooling Preserves Quality Vital to High Grade Milk

By IRA MILLER
Farm Electrification Bureau

Top quality in milk, the preservation of which is as important as its initial achievement, depends upon milk being properly and promptly cooled shortly after milking has made most farmers have turned from ice and water to electricity as a more economical, time and labor saving method for solving their milk cooling problem. Electric milk coolers are of two general types—"wet" and "dry." The first type employs electrically chilled water, automatically her contribution to the nation's food welfare.

The advantages of healthy herds, the use of clean, sterilized dairy utensils and sound farm management practices, can slip out of a farmer's grasp as easily as a greased pig at the county fair, unless milk is cooled below 50 degrees within approximately an hour and a half after milking time.

Milk is cooled on farms in one of three ways: by water, ice or mechanical refrigeration. Just as storm cellars cannot function adequately as storage places for perishable farm produce, so water alone cannot perform the job expected of it in cooling milk to a point where bacteria growth is halted. The addition of ice to water, often proves too costly even when a sufficient supply is available. Tests show that from 75 to 175 pounds of ice are needed to cool and store 40 gallons of milk per day in summer weather, bringing the cost of cooling, in some instances, to as much as $40 per month.

Faced with uncertain results on one hand and high costs on the other, kept at the proper cooling temperature by thermostatic control. The "dry" cooler requires an aerator for cooling the milk, which is then stored in a refrigerated compartment. Often the refrigerated compartment is large enough to be of the "walk-in" variety, suitable for the cold storage of meat, poultry, eggs, fruit and vegetables, in addition to milk.

In immersion coolers, milk cans are placed in insulated tanks, filled to the proper depth with "refrigerated" water. A number of coolers of this type are equipped with agitators, which circulate the water, thus providing more rapid transfer of heat from the milk. In aerator coolers, milk passes over a corrugated metal shield, which is cooled by a constant flow of temperature-controlled water, kept in motion by electricity.

The operating cost of electrical milk coolers averages about 1 kilowatt hour of power per 40 quarts. One mid-western farmer figures he spends $1.71 per month for electricity to cool 193 cans of milk in his 6-can immersion cooler.

For further information on prevention of farm accidents, contact your local county agent or nearest agricultural official—or write to the U. S. Department of Agriculture for free booklet on Farm Safety.

DON'T TAKE EVEN A LITTLE CHANCE WITH INJURY OR DEATH!

An official public service message prepared by the Advertising Council in cooperation with the National Safety Council and U. S. Department of Agriculture.

How many chances do you take every day?

- I take chances with machinery.
- I'm never careless with machinery.

Do you leave safety shields off power shafts, gears and chains? Wear loose-fitting clothing that may catch in machinery? Operate the tractor on dangerous inclines or banks? Let children play around equipment? Then tragedy may strike . . . for mishandled machinery and equipment are involved in 30% of fatal farm accidents.

- I swing onto highways carelessly.
- I always stop at highways.

Do you sneak through stop signs . . . fail to look both ways before turning onto highways from side roads? When walking on highways, do you heedlessly walk with, not facing, oncoming traffic? Are you careless crossing highways? If we're not careful, 6,500 farm residents will die this year in motor vehicle accidents.

- I put off repairing broken steps.
- I keep stairways well repaired.

Do stairways in your home and barn need repairs? Do you let stairways become cluttered with boxes, mops, brooms? Are they unlighted? Do you have ladder or hay-chute openings without handrails? These are the most common causes of falls . . . falls which account for 39% of all fatal accidents, just in farm homes alone!
