

New Film Shows Land's Importance

One or more copies of "Land and Life," a new educational motion picture portraying the relationship between land and people in the Southeast, will be made available to county farm and home agents for local showings throughout the State, according to L. S. Bennett, visual aids specialist for the State College Extension Service.

The film, a 25-minute natural color, sound picture, is sponsored by the Tennessee Valley Authority and the Agricultural Extension Services of Alabama, South Carolina, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, Tennessee, Virginia, and North Carolina. Its main purpose is to show how farmers of the South are learning that proper land use is the basis for creating new wealth.

The story is told through an old-fashioned family reunion. A school superintendent from North Carolina, a preacher from Virginia, a farmer from Alabama, men of many professions from all parts of the South come with their families back to the old homeplace—back to the farm that gave them life, fed them, clothed them, gave them their start in their chosen work.

As they come, the land speaks to them through the voice of Henry Joyner, narrator for the Cherokee pageant "Unto These Hills."

The North Carolina premiere of "Land and Life" was held recently at State College with David S. Weaver, extension director, presiding.

Appearing on the program were Chancellor J. W. Harrelson, Dean of Agriculture J. H. Hilton, State Home Agent Ruth Current, and W. M. Landess of the information section agricultural relations, TVA, who introduced the picture.

You'll feel the same way when you try a GMC yourself. Come in—compare the facts, the features, the way they haul. Listen to the savings talk.
