Meditation

See what love the Father has bestowed upon us, that we should be called God's children: and that is what we are. For this reason the world does not recognize us, because it did not recognize Him. Beloved, we are now God's children, but what we are to be has not yet been manifested. We know that if He appears we shall be like Him, because we shall see Him as He is. And any one who has this hope fixed on Him, purifies himself as He is pure. Everyone who commits sin also commits lawlessness; for sin is lawlessness. And you know that He appeared in order to take away sins; and in Him there is no sin. No one who abides in Him sins: no one who sins has seen Him or knows Him. —John.

Father's Day

Fathers will have their day on June 15. Already little packages are being wrapped, special cakes being baked, and surprises galore for that head of the house that seldom gets his due recognition are being planned.

Most fathers work diligently and unselfishly for the wife and children at home, to give them the necessities and luxuries they desire. Sometimes their efforts are unappreciated, and they seldom have any expression of gratitude from those for whom they labor. However, this is not true in many homes, and there is mutual love and affection on the part of the whole household, as it should be.

There is divine approval on homes, and the Scriptures place responsibility for supervision of the household upon the husband and father. Parents are charged to love their children, and children to obey and love their parents. Tyron Edwards interpreted it: "Honor thy parents, those that gave thee birth, and watched in tenderness thine earliest days, and trained thee up in youth, and loved in all. Honor, obey, and love them; it shall fill their souls with holy joy, and shall bring down God's richest blessing on thee; and in day to come, thy children, if they're given, shall honor thee, and fill thy life with peace."

Fathers who would train up their children in the way they should go, must go in the way in which they would have them go. When they are contemplating or doing some base deed, the presence of the child should act as a check on the headlong course of wrong.

To those fathers who earnestly and sincerely do their best for their families and loved ones, we give a special salute this week. To those who care nothing for their homes and constantly embarrass members of the family, we would point to the happiness that comes with living the right kind of life and wish for them that joy.

Greetings and best wishes, fathers, on your day!

Scouting With The Editor

HUNDREDS OF US MEMBERS of First Baptist Church and scores of visitors who have attended the revival services now going on under the leadership of Evangelist Carl Bassett have confessed their sins and re-dedicated their lives in recent services. At the invitation of the minister for church members to confess their sins and get right with God, asking Him to forgive them for all their sins and blot out anything that is a stumbling block or keeps them out of tune with God, a large majority of the church members present responded. On Tuesday night at the invitation of the pastor, asking those who had said hard things about others or had any ill will in their hearts, to confess it, practically all the audience responded. Also there have been many professions of faith and some joining the church by letter.

THE BEAUTIFUL chalk pictures which Mr. Bassett draws are presented to those who have brought the most new people to church that service. We have received three of them for our mission building, two of them for having the largest number. From six to twelve of our Mission Sunday School members have come daily to the services, and some have confessed Christ as Savior. There is rejoicing when anyone comes into the Kingdom, but there is an unspeakable joy when members of your mission or Sunday School class or others who are very near and dear to you join the great band of believers.

VARYING ALTITUDES make it possible for us to enjoy certain flowers of long periods. For instance, early in the spring a group of us were privileged to see the dogwood blooming in Savannah and Charleston. About three weeks later, it bloomed here. Still later, when all of ours was gone, we visited Chunky Gal and Whiteside Mountains and saw it again. Our flame azalea has been gone several weeks, and Saturday on a trip to Asheville to attend the Western North Carolina Press meeting, I saw this lovely plant just blooming on Soco. The laurel is beautiful there, too.

IN THE SMOKIES the laurel and purple rhododendron are at their height of beauty. There seem to be more blossoms than ever. Whole mountains are covered with either laurel or rhododendron, and the roadsides are lovely with these and other plants. Visitors from other states already are coming in large numbers to see the beauties of our mountains. May those of us who live here never fail to appreciate our scenery and other God-given assets.

SUNDAY is Father's Day, and I pause here to pay tribute to the memory of my beloved father, Thomas Braxton Cooke, who died November 8 1928. His outstanding characteristics which forever will be impressed upon my mind were his devotion to his church, his family, and his neighbors, his industry and courage, his honesty and sincerity.

Advices Mineral Oils To Control Tobacco Suckers

ROY R. BENNETT
Extension Tobacco Specialist

The use of white mineral oils and oil emulsions on tobacco for sucker control is a matter of great interest to tobacco growers especially with the labor situation being what it is. There has been two years' testing of the oil-emulsion on tobacco under a rather wide range of conditions.

Of the materials used, the heavy grades of white mineral oil and emulsifier mixed with an equal quantity of water has given the most satisfactory results. Both the straight oil and oil-emulsion has given very good sucker control. When properly applied and very little or no damage to the plants under favorable weather conditions; however, under damp, hot, humid weather conditions, soft rot may be a major problem. The oil-emulsion has given much less soft rot than the straight oil, but under some conditions even the oil-emulsion may cause more damage to the plants from soft rot, than the grower can afford to lose.

In a majority of experiments, demonstrations, and farmer trials with oil-emulsion, the incidence of soft rot has been rather low; however, in a few extreme cases the percent of dead or damaged plants has been much higher than the benefits derived from the use of the mineral. Because of the danger of soft rot, the use of white mineral oil or oil-emulsion for the control of suckers cannot be recommended for general use at this time.

If a grower wishes to try this method of sucker control on a small scale, there are several points that may be helpful: One of the commercially prepared white oils with an emulsifier should be mixed with an equal quantity of water. About 1/2 to 1 teaspoonful of this emulsion should be used per plant, depending upon the size of the plants. The plants should be topped and treated about the time the first flowers begin to open. Suckers longer than 2 to 3 inches may not be effectively controlled. The quality of flue-cured tobacco treated with oil-emulsions or plain mineral oil thus far has been judged to be equal to that topped and suckered by hand.

Bristol To Play Ball In Oregon

David Bristol, bonus baseball boy from Andrews, will report this week to Ogden, Utah, where he will play on a Circinnatti Red farm team for the second consecutive season.

Last season young Dave played Class D ball in the Appalachian League. He was with the Welch, W. Va., team. While batting a .270 for the season's average, Dave was commended for his fielding performance by his manager, and has moved up a notch toward the coveted Majors by playing in the Pioneer League, which is Class C.

Dave stated that he feels that he was in much better shape this season, for besides having a season's experience behind him he was able to work out with the college team at the University of North Carolina where he was a member of the freshman class. He stated that although he was ineligible for college sports the coaches had been very kind to him in allowing him to work out with the team and get in shape.

Dave left Monday by car with relatives for Ogden.

Mr. Roberson stated that rattlers are not uncommon in the area, and that they are frequently killed, but they seldom exceed three feet in length. The snake was found near the W. A. Franklin farm.

Tell the Truth

"FOR SALE: A portrait of George Washington, engraved on the finest bond paper, suitable for framing. Send only 25c, while they last. So ran an advertisement some years ago. When suckers sent in their quarters, what they got back were two-cent stamps. Now the ad had not "hold a lie" in direct words. It was a portrait of Washington, right enough; a postage stamp is engraved on the finest bond paper, a n. c. It's suitable for framing if you like to frame anything as small as that. So the suckers could not get their money back. But the ad was a lie all the same, for it misled people into thinking something that wasn't true.

Lies can be told without the use of words at all, lies can be told with winks of the eye, with facial expressions or gestures. A store window can be full of lies, for the merchandise there may not be actually like what they will sell you in the dim-lit store. Truth is more than just telling a lie in actual words, truth is conveying ideas that do not deceive.

Scientific Truth
JESUS seldom argued that truth is right, just as he seldom if ever argued that honesty is a good thing. Every one knows it.

What would you think of a person who came to you with this recommendation? "This man is a hard worker, he has plenty of brains, he has only one fault and that is, he is a liar." You'd never hire him. Every one wants truth told him.

But there are different kinds of truth. One is scientific. Now it is hardly possible to tell the complete truth from a scientific point of view.

"How old are you?" is a simple question and most people answer it simply: Five, or fifty-five, or whatever the nearest year may be. But that's not a scientific answer. Five and how many months, how many weeks, how many days, hours, minutes, seconds?

You see by the time you have figured it out to seconds (which would be the scientific truth) you are already several minutes older.

Well, you say, I don't care to know how old you are down to the last second. Of course you don't, and that brings up another kind of truth.

Social Truth
THE KIND of truth in which Jesus was especially interested, and in which all of us take the most interest, is what we can call social truth, the kind of truthfulness that makes for friendly and trustworthy relationships between man and man.

If you apply for a driver's license and say you are seventeen when you are only fifteen, that's a lie. If you are seventeen and say so, and if your state will let you have a license at that age, then the clerk doesn't care a particle whether you are also seventeen and eleven months or seventeen and eleven hours.

"How are you?" is a harmless and common question. But if you have any sense, you won't answer, "Well, I don't know exactly because I have not had a check-up. But my pulse was 73 at 8:32 this morning. I have a slight fuzziness on my tongue. I did not have enough appetite to eat my sixth griddle cake for breakfast, my left foot seems to be developing a fallen arch, I am getting over my dandruff by degrees. . . ." Who wants to know all that? Just tell them, "I'm fine."

Sacrificial Truth
THE PINCH comes when a teeny-weeny lie seems likely to help us out of a jam. What's the harm in a lie that doesn't hurt any one? Jesus gives us the answer. He classifies deceit along with the other sins that truly "defile a man."

When it comes to a show-down, which kind of man would you rather deal with: the man who will lie to keep himself out of trouble, or the man who is willing to take any kind of hurt rather than to dirty himself with a lie?

Truth when it hurts others may be sheer meanness; truth that hurts the truth-teller may be the noblest form of truth.
