Joe Ray Says Dead Letters Are Costly

Postmaster Joe E. Ray of Murphy today stated that Dead letters are expensive for the post office to handle. It is a disappointment for you and the person to whom you are sending mail. He said, the National Association of Postmasters is stressing proper addressing of mail—in order to reduce the number of Dead Letters.

Always place your return address on all mail. It should show your home address when mailing away from home. It should show your complete address, street and number, or RFD number and box number. When addressing mail it should be complete and correct.

Include in the address the zone number if known. In the case the person to whom you are addressing, is visiting, send the letter in care of the person with whom they are visiting. This applies to all mail including Parcel Post.

Dead letters and other Dead Mail, is mail that cannot be delivered as addressed, and does not have the return address.

Your postmaster, post office clerks and carriers will gladly advise you on any problem you have in proper preparing and addressing mail.

Remember at least 10 pieces of properly addressed mail can be handled in less time than it takes to handle one piece of incorrectly prepared and improperly addressed mail.
