Crossing Barriers
Lesson for January 24, 1954

NOT all walls are made of brick and stone. Some walls are not to be seen at all, but they are there. Have you ever been a shy young girl, a stranger perhaps, at a party where everybody seemed to be having a wonderful time? To your mind it almost seemed as if there were a sort of conspiracy against you. Everybody seemed to see the point of jokes you could not see at all. Everybody else felt at ease but you did not in the least. It seemed as if you could feel the wall that shut you in. Or consider another kind of party, a dinner in a home of some wealth. The guests at the table are friendly and frank, they talk about matters that perhaps concern the servants who are waiting on the table; but there is a wall there no one can see. The servant would not for the world interrupt, because she is not supposed to hear. The guests talk as if she were not there.

Dr. Foreman
The guests at the table are friendly and frank, they talk about matters that perhaps concern the servants who are waiting on the table; but there is a wall there no one can see. The servant would not for the world interrupt, because she is not supposed to hear. The guests talk as if she were not there.

Man-Made Barriers

It is these invisible walls that cause more trouble in the world than most of those that can be felt with the hand. In some countries they are more numerous than in America, but we have them too. The wall between the educated and the uneducated; between those who go to church and those who never do; the wall between the sexes, another between races; walls between old and young; between city people and country people; between management and labor, and so on. Such barriers are not always intentional, they arise naturally in certain situations. If a person has acted in some mean way against his community—if he has committed theft or adultery, and it is known—he finds himself shut out from decent company even if they do not look behind the walls of some prison. He may find these invisible walls so hard and high that he can no longer live in the town where he was born, but must go to live among strangers. Other walls too, less tragic in consequences, rise without any one's planning them, such as the wall between teacher and students, between the boss and the workman, the customer and the merchant.

Some Walls Are Good

Some walls are actually good. One of these is the wall of Privacy. The lady that runs the "Ding Dong School" on TV was saying only last summer that even little children need privacy. Mothers make a mistake when they insist—sometimes right on into the teens—on seeing every scrap of mail the child writes, on knowing every minute of the day what the child is doing. Virginia Woolf wrote a book called "A Room of Her Own." Isn't that what we all need? Many a family has broken to pieces just because the house where they lived was a bit too small. There was no place where any one of the family could get away from everyone else for a rest. We all naturally dislike busybodies, asking questions they have no business to ask.

How to Cross Barriers

On the other hand, many man-made barriers are bad in their effects. They act as prison walls, behind them men and women sink into dark and poisonous air, writing without the sunshine that comes to those living beyond the wall. Such a wall, in ancient times, was erected between the Samaritans and the regular Jews. It was an invisible wall; but it had no doors and no one crossed it. Yet one day Jesus walked right through that barrier and several other walls all at the same time, to talk to a Samaritan woman. Between were the walls of sex—gentlemen did not speak in public to women; of morality—she was beneath even "ordinary" respectability; of nationality and race—he was of pure blood, she of a decidedly mixed breed of intelligence—she must have had a pretty low I.Q. But Jesus talked with her—not small talk, which she would have preferred, but something far more serious and searching. Jesus was always doing this kind of thing. How did he manage it? By the simplest way in the world: he would go right through these man-made barriers as if they were not there, because he knew that walls which man's mind has made, man's good-will can make to disappear.
