GARDEN TIME

BY ROBERT SCHMIDT

Each kind of tree, shrub or plant has a best time and method for propagating it. We cannot discuss all of them here but there are a few plants that are most successfully propagated at this season of the year. For example, many gardeners in eastern North Carolina are growing the evergreen species of azaleas.

Of course, it is easy to purchase azaleas from the nurseries, but that will take money and it is not very difficult to grow your own if you are willing to give them some care. These azaleas may be easily propagated by cuttings taken from the plant in June or July. The cuttings should be made of the present season's wood, about four inches long, after the base of the new stem has become partially matured.

The best medium in which to root azaleas is a mixture of half pure sand and half peat moss. This material may be put in a special frame or shallow box to a depth of about six inches, in a place where the frame can be shaded and watered when necessary. The leaves should be stripped from the lower half of the cutting, the basal end cut with sharp knife, and dipped in rootone powder. Then the cuttings are inserted in the sand and peat mixture about half their length and firmed. They may be set close together in rows. Strict attention must be paid to shading and watering. In a few weeks roots will develop on most of the cuttings and they should be potted up or transplanted to a cold frame where they can be protected until ready to set out in a permanent place. Rootone powder may be obtained at any large seed store.

The peach is another plant that must be propagated at this time of the year. The peach will not come true to variety from seed, and therefore, if you have any peach seedlings it is best to graft a known variety upon them. Since the peach cannot be grafted successfully in winter, like the apple, it must be budded during July or August. Contact your county agent at once for instructions or bulletins on budding peach trees.

Pecans are also budded at this time of year. A pecan does not come true to variety from seed.

This attractive nursery above, was decorated with a self-adhesive toy print plastic fabric, latest adjunct to the do-it-yourself trend. Left: Paper backing is pulled away from plastic fabric; then simply applied to wall, chest and chair.

Welcome home, Baby! Your lovely nursery is waiting for you, thanks to your mother's handiwork in decorating with a self-adhesive plastic fabric in a colorful new toy print. This new product waterproofs the walls behind the bathinette. To keep everything gay, the chest and kitchen stool are decorated with pink and white striped "Con-Tact" to match a scalloped border that extends around the three painted walls. Do-it-yourselfers give first consideration to the self-adhesive plastic product because it applies easily to plaster, wood or metal without removing varnish or paint. No tools, water or paste are needed. Con-Tact can be lifted and replaced to remove wrinkles and air bubbles. The plastic product is available in 35 vibrant colors and fresh prints.
