They found they were attending the same church with President Eisenhower, his son, Capt. John Eisenhower and grandson, David. The Andrews folks sat just two seats behind the Eisenhower's.

GIANT TROUT

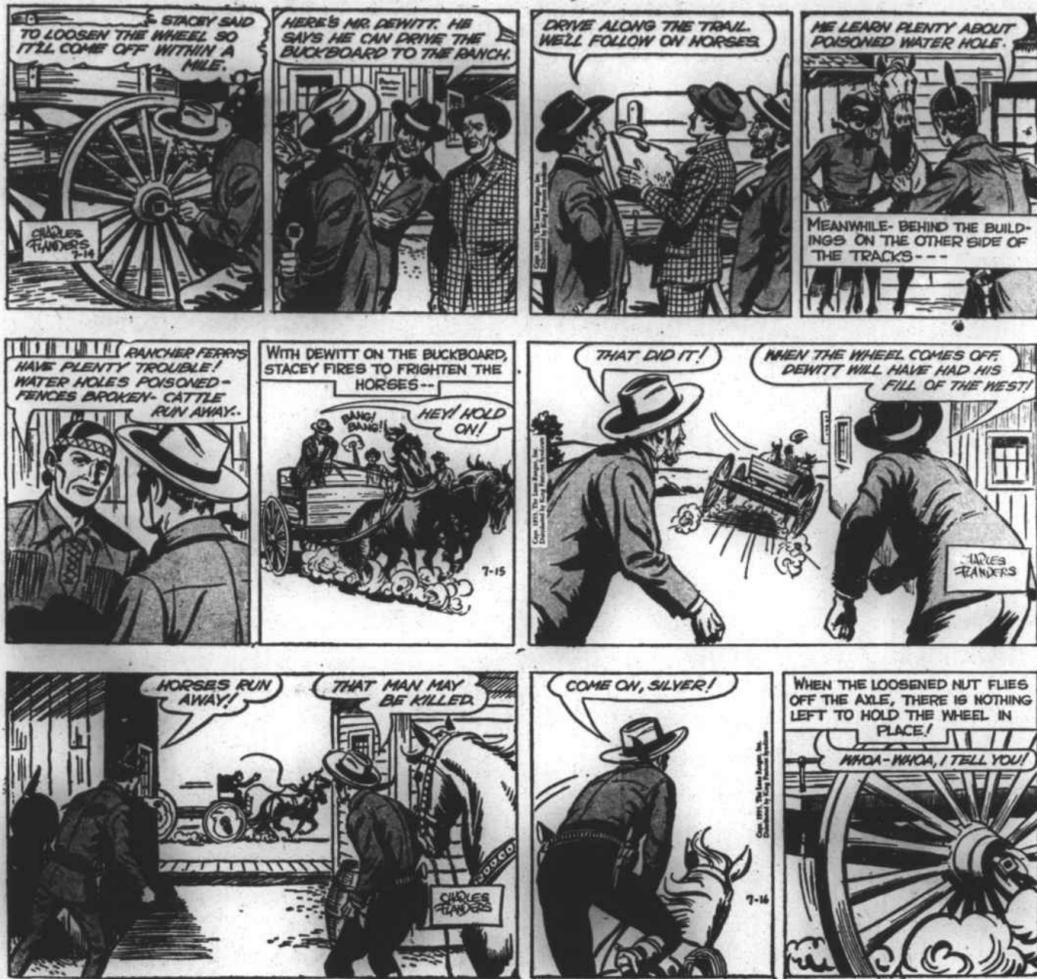

JEFF DEAVERS, above pulled this giant brown trout from the Nantahala River at the duck hole, not far from the U. S. post office there. Deavers, who is fishing guide of Gatlinburg, Tenn., was just about to land an eight-inch rainbow when the giant brown stuck, swallowing the rainbow almost at once. Then followed a battle lasting over an hour since Jeff was using a four-pound test line at the time. The real secret of the brown's capture was that it was never able to close its mouth because of the rainbow's tail in the way. As a result, the big fellow finally drowned. It weighed 9 1/2 pounds and measured 32 inches long. (Great Smokies News Bureau)
