

Future Bright For North Carolina Poultrymen

A ray of sunshine is seen on the horizon for poultry producers. An expert says eggs prices are likely to rise more this fall than usual, then continue at profitable levels through the coming years.

Clayton Libeau, egg marketing specialist for the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service at State College, declares smaller laying flocks, reduced egg production and higher prices are in the picture for next year's producers.

Libeau points out that American farmers are raising an estimated 3994 million young chickens this year—18 per cent less than last. This figure does not, however, include commercial broiler production.

All sections of the country are cutting productions of chickens for laying flock replacements, according to Libeau. The decrease is greatest on farms with small flocks.

By the first of next year, declares Libeau, the U. S. laying flock is expected to be at least 7 per cent smaller than a year earlier. Average rate of lay is expected to be as much as 5 per cent below last year's levels.

Smaller production plus increase in housewife buying power should mean higher incomes and prices for egg producers until at least October of 1958, explains Libeau.

QUESTION: What is the outlook for wheat prices?

ANSWER: Production this year is down about 6 per cent. With a large volume going under loan, expected domestic use and exports, prices should remain firm during the fall months, with normal price rise throughout the winter period. Prices in North Carolina probably will average higher than last year for quality wheat.

Plans call for the presentation of a program each week for the high school students. Mrs. Pope Singleton, English teacher, is serving as faculty advisor to the club.

Other members of the club are: Sue Adams, Helen Allison, Jean Frady, Lucille Garland, Virginia Hawkins, Ann Hedrick, Rita Helton, Betty Sue Morrow, Kathryn Murphy, Syble Ramsey, Mary Jo Roberts, Judy Swanson, Hazel Slagle, and Joyce Styles.

Specialist Gives Hints On Care Of Leather Upholstery

By RUTH CURRENT

All Kinds of Leather care during hot days—Use saddle soap to clean leather upholstery or leather surfaces on tables, advise Extension home furnishings specialists. To clean leather simply dampen a cloth or sponge in warm water, wring it out, then rub it over saddle soap. Rub the leather briskly. Then rub with another moist cloth without soap. Rub dry with a clean soft cloth. Any gloss which disappears will be restored by friction of the last rubbing.

The specialist warns against using furniture polishes, oils or varnishes on leather because these preparations frequently contain solvents that cause leather to become sticky.

If leather appears to be drying out, rub it with a small amount of a leather dressing with the fingers and palm of the hand. In humid weather leather mildews easily. Keep leather as clean as possible and in a dry place. Wipe mildew off (with a damp cloth) promptly, then dry with an electric fan. Leather shoes, handbags and bookbindings as well as leather upholstery need to be kept in a dry place in summer to prevent mildew.

KEEP HOT THINGS HOT, COLD THINGS COLD—A hot-water bottle will stay hot, or an ice bag cold, longer if you wrap it in foil. To delay melting ice cubes removed from tray, place cubes in mixing bowl, cover tightly with foil.

Permanent pastures and alfalfa are long-lived crops and therefore do not have to be sown each year.

Market Specialist Gives Guide To Buying Shortening

Today's creamy, white plastic shortenings available to food shoppers everywhere represent great strides in the chemical and industrial fields.

According to Ruby P. Uzzle, Agricultural Extension Service consumer marketing specialist, agriculture has shared honors as cottonseed oil and soybean oil are refined and converted into these products in increasing amounts each year.

Just how does a food shopper select shortenings for home use? As a shopper's guide, Mrs. Uzzle gives the following observations and suggestions:

The shortening shopper relies on the manufacturer for a quality product. Packed in vacuum sealed cans, the characteristics of the shortening are not seen until the package is opened for use. However as Mrs. Uzzle points out, shortenings generally have uniform quality.

Hydrogenated all-vegetable shortenings of good quality should have the following characteristics:

1. Good keeping quality without refrigeration.
2. Characteristic bland flavor and odor.
3. Creamy white color
4. Plastic consistency and smooth texture.

One word of caution is given by Mrs. Uzzle when she explains that some salad oils are marketed as liquid shortenings. She points out that this term does not indicate a change in the oil itself, but refers to the shortening uses which can be made of the oils.

The recommended materials for treating oats, rye, barley and wheat seeds are Ceresan M. Panogen and Ceresan 100.

Broiler producers can look for a slight drop in price this month.
