GERMANS VISIT "FACTORY"
East Germans Await Opening Of Amerika Haus

Reds Call It A "Spy Factory" But East Germans Crowd It For Books, Music

America has a "spy factory" in Berlin.

That's what the Communists call Amerika Haus, the new $250,000 United States Information Center.

But in an afternoon there was nothing more sinister than a few gray-haired grannies reading newspapers were seen.

Or maybe it's American jazz—that's the sinister—there was a whole group of eager German youths listening to the latest long-playing jazz discs from the States.

According to the Soviet-controlled East German press, Amerika Haus is a nest of espionage, where secret agents are recruited for cloak-and-dagger work behind the Iron Curtain.

Only RIAS, the American radio station beamed to East Germany, is attacked more violently in the Communist press. When not accused of subverting the Soviet regime, Amerika Haus is attacked as "this mecca of stupidity and imbecility."

Certainly, Amerika Haus is a remarkable operation by any yardstick. Through its doors have passed 200,000 visitors from East Berlin and from the Soviet zone of East Germany during the past year.

In coming to Amerika Haus, East Germans risk being identified—they could be photographed entering the building—and arrested by the Vopos, as the East German police are called.

Yet they come in droves, an average of 800 Easterners visiting Amerika Haus daily. They come to see the latest newsreels to read latest news about the free world and about their own Communist bloc. They come to breathe free air.

Happily, there is safety in numbers. "It would take 800 Vopos to tail these people to their homes and arrest them," says Jay W. Gildner, director of Amerika Haus and the only American on its staff.

Gildner and other officials leave the Easterners strictly alone. "We don't want to know them to feel free to come and go as they choose, with no questions asked. They have enough people checking on them in East Germany, and we want them to feel the difference."

Occasionally, however, Easterners will approach Gildner with messages of thanks to President Eisenhower and the American people for providing Amerika Haus.

The thing that irks the Communist the most about Amerika Haus is that it attracts so many young people from East Germany—students and young skilled workers of the type who are seeking refuge in the West by the thousands.

Most of the young East Germans come to read the latest American technical journals, to attend concerts and lectures, and to perfect their English.

Amerika Haus has the only library in West Berlin that will lend books to East Germans. This presents a special problem, as the library cannot check out books without some guarantee of their return. Therefore, the library has worked out a system whereby names of Eastern borrowers are kept locked in a safe. It reports that book losses incurred through lending to East Germans are less than one per cent.

Shortly before Christmas a 12-year-old East German girl came to Amerika Haus in tears. She explained that she had been searched by Vopos while boarding a subway to return two library books.

The Vopos confiscated the books warning her never again to go near Amerika Haus where little girls were daily kidnaped, they claimed. She seemed much more concerned about the loss of the books than about the shattering experience she Amerika Haus, which is the only U.S. Information center behind the Iron Curtain, first started in a badly-bombed building in 1946. Originally, its books were donated by American soldiers after they had read them.

When young designers work with fur, you can expect fashionable and wearable furs at reasonable prices. Here are two more examples:

Jeanne Campbell of Sportwhirl—the designer who says "I want to supply youthful and dramatic furs for under $500 that will span the seasons for the owner," created this handsome "Quick Change" jacket in beige-dyed American processed lamb. And, amazingly enough, the jacket accents slacks and sheaths with equal appeal!

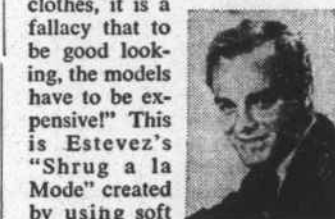

Jeanne Campbell

Luis Estevez of Estevez, Inc.—the designer who practices what he preaches: "In furs, as in clothes, it is a fallacy that to be good looking, the models have to be expensive!" This is Estevez's "Shrug a la Mode" created by using soft white fox stitched to moire ribbon.

Surely there isn't a female anywhere who couldn't look "like a million" in this $250 fur!

Luis Estevez

Next month you'll meet designers Jeanne Carr of Jonathan Logan and Donald Brooks of Hedges, Ltd., and their young-in-heart, slim-of-pocketbook furs.

Before moving into its new quarters in June, 1957, Amerika Haus was visited by more than 11 million persons, had loaned 3,500,000 books. Now it has already outgrown its new building and is looking for room to expand.

MORE PROOF...it pays to feed PURINA

Alvis Fleming and Purina Salesman Travis Westbrook

Purina's dairy program has helped this North Carolina herd produce

1,477 lbs. more milk per cow

Shortly after Alvis Fleming began his dairy operation with 50 cows on 600 acres outside Littleton, N. C., he took two steps forward which have helped him build both his herd size and production per cow in short order.

He started testing his cows for production on DHIA. Soon after, he began managing and feeding his herd the research-backed Purina Way.

In one year his herd average increased by 1,477 lbs. milk per cow. At the same time, he began to see definite improvement in the form of faster-growing, thrifter calves; bigger, healthier heifers; and well-conditioned dry cows joining the milking string with ample reserve strength to carry them through long, productive lactations.

See us for details about Purina's research-backed Program for Dairy Cattle, followed by Alvis Fleming and other fast-growing dairymen wherever cows are important.
