Applications For Big Game Hunts

Applications for deer and bear hunts on western North Carolina Wildlife Management Areas are now available, according to Frank Barick, Chief of the Wildlife Resources Commission Game Division.

Advance application requirements apply only to the wilderness hunts for deer, and to party hunts for bear and boar. Applications are no longer required for the one-day deerhunts since the opening of several new areas provides more than ample opportunity for all hunters to participate at their convenience. Also, delayed starting times on high pressure deer hunt areas—a system used during the past two hunting seasons and continued for the coming season—have proven helpful and satisfactory in distributing hunting pressure among the numerous areas now open.

Use of delayed starting time—starting the hunt at 12:00 noon rather than 7:00 a.m.—deflects excessive hunting pressure away from "high pressure" areas and encourages greater use of "low pressure" areas where hunting is allowed to start at 7:00 a.m. This has the effect of spreading the hunting effort over a greater territory, thus providing for greater hunter safety.
