WHY NOT VOTE AGAINST KHRUSHCHEV?

"WHILE YOU VOTE FOR YOUR DISTRICT AND AMERICA"

OLLMAN hates Khrushchev and what he stands for with a passion.

What Congress needs today, and in the next 50 years, are members of Congress who love their districts, who know their districts, and who will work for them at least 8 hours a day. I don't question most candidates' qualifications in any way in this respect.

But, if members of Congress don't stop piddling around and if the people don't send to Congress people who can fight another 8 hours a day to keep the U. S. the Number One nation, then we will lose-out by just electing the wrong people to Congress.

OLLMAN will give this district everything he has. Just as he got the Fontana Road situation straightened out, just like he got new industry to come to our district so he will continue to work for his district. But, at the same time, he will promise you that he will work an extra 8 hours every day to keep the U. S. the Number One nation. If enough people in enough districts also elect the right candidates, then you will see communism start on its well deserved decline.

A VOTE FOR OLLMAN IS NOT ONLY A VOTE FOR THE BETTERMENT OF THE 12TH CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT, IT IS ALSO A VOTE AGAINST KHRUSHCHEV AND HIS KIND. AND NO AMOUNT OF LIES OR RUMORS ABOUT OLLMAN, NOR ANY KIND OF ATTACK ON HIS CHARACTER, CAN OR WILL EVER CHANGE THESE FACTS.

BOOK REVIEW

"The Highest Tree"

By Dore Schary.

With a forward by Adlai Stevenson

New York: Random House

130 pp. $2.95

Academy - award - winning author, producer, and director, Dore Schary has written a moving, three-act drama of man's intolerance to man and of the consequences of cyclotrons and Canaveral. Distinguished atomic scientist Aaron Cornish, a lovely widower, has just been told that he has acute leukemia caused by excessive radiation and may expect to live approximately six months. In direct contrast to this dilemma, Aaron also learns that within these same months, he will become a grandfather.

As Aaron gropes painfully to settle his affairs and find the courage to confront family and friends with his doom, an older brother and sister continue to seek and depend on Aaron's wisdom and diplomacy to solve every family crisis.

The ordinary conversation and the commonplace events, seemingly unimportant, form an unobtrusive background which serves to spotlight the growing turmoil within the mind of a dying man.

Heavy-handed irony and tension mount as a Beatnik poet chants humorously of death at a family Thanksgiving party. One sympathizes with Schary's hero when he takes one Scotch too many after this macabre performance and reveals his well-kept secret to Mary Macready, the young woman who loves him.

For obvious reasons, this play will not likely be as successful as Schary's "Sunrise at Campobello." Nevertheless, its impressive theme of human accomplishment will awaken every reader who dares to take for granted the privilege of living.

DEMINSHING LAND: OUR CHALLENGE

Today Americans have only 10.6 of all kinds of land and only approximately 2.6 acres of cropland per capita. The prospect is a further reduction to 8.8 acres total and 2.25 acres of cropland in 1975. This is based on an estimate of 215,800,000 people in 1975. Many farmers and others are seriously concerned about this situation, and in this concern lies the greatest hope for the future.

"Oh, but we have a surplus of farm crops. Why should we worry about our supply of land running out?" This is the question of many who do not understand the situation. If Americans do not give their land better treatment their successors will not long have the abundance, let alone the surplus of agricultural products. Then the American farm problems will be one of scarcity like that which exists in so much of the world today.

Fortunately, Americans are caring for their land better than did those who lived 100 years ago. Farmers and other country folk and many city dwellers as well, are realizing more and more that the ultimate source of their food is the soil and not the supermarket in the nearby shopping center.

The national soil and water conservation movement which began in the mid 1930's already has awakened many people to the situation. Farmers realize that there are no new lands to which they can turn as did their forefathers. The great body of Americans who consume, but do not produce food, should be made aware of their dependence upon the land and should understand the necessity for public support of such movements.

The awakened public consciousness should, and will, effectively prevent the recurrence of "price" farm failures in the future. For land properly used and cared for will continue to produce indefinitely row crops, pasture, or other products needed by man.

Nature strives to reclothe the land with broomsage and pine trees in Cherokee County. With a little help and care, barren fields can be made to serve man's needs by supplying valuable conservation. Efforts are increasing, but more must be done.
