BOOK REVIEW
"The Remarkable Kennedys"
By Joe McCarthy
New York: The Dial Press
190 pp. $3. 50
Reviewed by Miss Maria Travis

The author, Joe McCarthy, is well known for his magazine articles of subjects and personalities in the news today. Since 1948, when he began to freelance, his byline has appeared in almost every important magazine in America. Perhaps he is best known for his humor column for "The American Weekly."

This book, a saga of "rags to riches," reads like a biographical fairy tale of Joseph P. Kennedy, Ambassador to England during the F. D. R. administration, and his nine children, who all seem to have inherited his Irish spirit and political aspirations.

After graduating from Harvard, where he was a baseball star, Dad Kennedy went into banking, becoming a bank president at 25. Other businesses included real estate, ship building, and movie making. Today the vast financial holdings of the Kennedys are estimated at 250 million.

As the Kennedy youngsters were born and grew, it was money, money, money for their dad. But he refused to let his affluence go to the children's heads, giving them an allowance of 50 cents a week. The Whiz Kids didn't become influential by accident. Their parents planned it that way by loving them, showing interest in them, and demanding that they lead useful lives.

Dad Kennedy used a clever weapon on his kids--one frequently overlooked by most parents--he talked with them, telling them this was a great and good country and they owed it much. He said they could pay their debt by being useful.

Early glimpses of the Kennedy Clan reveal a closely-knit family group, sharing their joys and sorrows, and appearing to have much fun together in various sports, cycling, sailing, golf, and horseback riding.

During World War II the family life was marred by two tragedies, the death of a daughter, Kathleen, and of the oldest son, Navy flier, Joe; both were killed in airplane crashes. After Joe's death, the family published a collective group of writings about him called, "As We Remember Joe."

Most of the story concerns young John (Jack) Kennedy, who was automatically elected to fill Joe's shoes and enter politics. The father, a classic self-made multimillionaire himself, gave his children one million dollars each in order that they might be economically free to serve their country and fellowman as they saw fit.

For six days Jack was lost when his PT boat was wrecked in Japanese waters. In spite of a serious back injury, Jack's indomitable spirit kept up hope among the survivors. In 1955, recuperating from an operation to relieve pain in his back, Jack wrote his Pulitzer prize-winning book, "Profiles In Courage."

Beneath that Ivy league exterior is a bright-eyed, bushy haired, talkative, shrewd young politician with an uncanny ability to sell himself. In the Eisenhower landslide of '52, Jack Kennedy was the only Democratic winner in his state. This astounded and confused the experts.

If the Kennedy accomplishments are enunciated with finesse, the blunders are not purposely omitted. That is what makes this a good book.

Halloween Party Given

Mrs. George Dyer, Mrs. Lillard Walker, and Mrs. Kenneth Godfrey entertained with a Halloween carnival at the home of Mrs. Dyer on Monday afternoon from 1 to 3 p.m. for the second grade children of the Murphy Elementary School.

The playroom was decorated within keeping of Halloween.

Games, contests, and fortune teller added to the party. Hot dogs, potato chips, cokes, and candy was served to the 36 children present.

Potts - Barton Vows Spoken

Wedding vows were spoken in a candlelight service by Miss Sue Potts and Mr. Billy Barton on Saturday, October 29, 1960, at 6 p.m. at the Peachtree Memorial Baptist Church.

The Rev. Robert Barker performed the double-ring ceremony. Traditional wedding music was presented by Mrs. Dock Sudderth, pianist, and Miss Joyce Waldroup, soloist.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lester Potts of Rome, Ga. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Norman Barton of Peachtree, and the late Mr. Barton.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, wore a white sheath street-length dress with white accessories. She carried a white Bible with a white orchid.

Miss Joyce Black of Atlanta was maid of honor.

Mr. Howard Barton, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man.

Following the ceremony, the couple was honored with a reception in the basement of the church.

Mr. and Mrs. Barton will make their home in Atlanta.

Though conscience doesn't keep you from doing the wrong thing, it certainly keeps you from enjoying it.

Kennedy's Sister To Campaign In Asheville

Mrs. Eunice Shriver, sister of Senator John F. Kennedy, will make a campaign visit to Asheville November 4 for a 12th Congressional District Democratic women's reception and coffee in the City Auditorium.

Mrs. R. R. Williams, Jr., of Asheville, is in charge of the arrangements.

Here are some of the things Reporter Koterba has to say about Heinz Rollman whom he met in Washington:

HONESTY
Congress Needs Heinz

By Ed Koterba

WASHINGTON -- Heinz Rollman, as a candidate, shook hands with the President at a White House glad-handing ceremony.

To the Chief Executive Heinz said: "This could happen only in America. . . . twenty-five years ago this morning, Hitler kicked me out of Germany, and on this anniversary I'm shaking hands with the President of the United States as a candidate for the Congress."

The President gave Heinz' $29 mail-order suit a second glance as the man moved down the line. Heinz makes no show of his wealth.

He settled in Waynesville, N. C., in 1940 with $161 and his bride. That's all he had.

From 6 to 12,000 He borrowed money from another refugee who arrived earlier, and they set up a cobler shop. Built six pairs of shoes, a day with his hands and some simple machinery. Today, it's 12,000 pairs every working day.

Heinz Rollman tried for Congress two years ago. But what defeated him was, alas, his honesty.

A few days before the election he filed his campaign expenses.

Heinz' wife said: "Heinz, you either tell the truth or quit." Perhaps for the first time in the history of North Carolina politics, the full amount was reported by a candidate.

His political adversaries made hay of that figure and Heinz lost.

I like this man Heinz Rollman. It's true that he may be unorthodox, for he puts honesty above political ethics. But that's perhaps what we need more of in the Congress of the United States today.

Local "GI" Agrees With World Famous Reporter

A soldier from Canton stationed in Germany, recently saw a newspaper article entitled, "Congress Needs Heinz". It was written by Ed Koterba, Washington correspondent. His column is published by the largest papers all over the country and overseas.

Many North Carolina papers also published the column.

The GI wrote this to his mother:

"From what I have read in the Canton paper and on this article I think this is the type of man we need in Congress now. He will certainly get my vote. I just hope enough people in Western North Carolina realize that in this man they have someone they have been needing for years. This guy seems the type of man that is honest and stands by his convictions. I am in full agreement with the last paragraph. This world today needs more unorthodox men that put honesty above politics. You can tell him I said so too if you all know him. I just hope that the people in that area aren't narrow minded enough to hold a man's place of birth or on accent against him."

Yes, Congress needs Heinz Rollman, a man who is nationally and internationally recognized for his devotion to his fellowmen. And it will be a great help to our district to have a Congressman who already before coming to Washington enjoys such national, indeed world-wide, reputation as Rollman. He can accomplish a great deal more in shorter time for his district than other members of Congress who do not enjoy his reputation even if they have been for years and years in Washington.
