"I saved half the cost on my dairy building by going to 'tilt-up' concrete!"

Says JOHNNY ROUCHON, Clinton, Louisiana

Johnny Rouchon's concrete tilt-up building has six separate sections under one roof. Besides the main barn, he has a big feed room, milk room, sick bay, office and pump room. Plenty of space to handle his 100 milking cows.

"I was planning on brick until I heard about this new concrete tilt-up method. I got the building I wanted in concrete for $12,000 to $15,000 less—and used the same plans. I'm planning a new calf barn and I figure it will cost only 60¢ a square foot, even including a concrete floor. That's plenty low for a durable, maintenance-free building."

Real quality construction at low cost—tilt-up concrete is the simple way to get it. Want to know about it? Write for free informative booklet showing construction details.
