Pay To NC Workers

Raleigh - Back wages totaling $45,368.08 were paid to Tar Heel workers under the State's new Minimum Wage Law during the first eleven months of 1960, State Labor Commissioner Frank Crane reported.

Crane said the back pay was received by 1,480 workers after Labor Department inspections had revealed the under - payments. The payments were made by 466 employers.

The Minimum Wage Law, which became effective Jan. 1, 1960, requires employers to pay at least 75 cents an hour m covered employees. First statute of its kind in the South, the law applies to most workers employed in North Carolina retail trade and service industries.

Crane said 10,688 minimum wage inspections were made under the law from Isluary through November this year. About five percent of 'the employers inspected were found to be wolating the law. Commissioner Crane said. The bulk of these violations were caused by carelessnes's or ignorance concerning application of the statute, he added.

Ninety-five percent of all inspected employers were found in full compliance with the minimum wage, Crane stated.

"Such a record of nearly total observance of the law during its first year of operation is a heartening tribute to the good will and good sense of most North Carolina employers," declared Crane, 'At the time this law was enacted, I voiced my confidence that the alert and fairminded employers of North Carolina would adjust to its requirements without serious difficulty. Our experience with the law this year has proven that confidence to have been well founded."
